Cuba: Sustainable Agriculture As National Defense?

Cuba has come up with some unique methods of self-sustenance over the years. Here, customers arrive at a bustling Havana farmers market. Most booths are managed by intermediaries who are contracted directly by farmers to market their products. Tomatoes displayed here for 5 pesos per pound (about 20 cents U.S.) are considered expensive. Photo by Brian Snyder, Centre Co. correspondent

HAVANA, Cuba — Two days before the war in Iraq began, and as Secretary of Homeland Security Tom Ridge announced that the terrorism threat level was being raised to orange, USDA Secretary Ann Veneman announced a corresponding increase in security for all USDA facilities and functions.

In a memo released by the department, Veneman detailed some of the changes that would be forthcoming. The memo lists several specific actions, including the secretary's orders to "increase perimeter security at all USDA facilities and restrict access to essential personnel," and "Alert industry and producer organizations of the threat status and urge them to implement additional security measures such as inspecting all vehicles entering facilities and operations and escorting all visitors."

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A one-day conference on Tuesday provided "an opportunity to get together to talk about issues we're all facing," said Dan Azzara, Hershey Foods Corporation.

The fourth biannual conference, designed to address issues such as agro/bioterrorism and provide participants with useful information, drew 60 people to the symposium and 90 to the evening dinner.

Azzara discussed Congress's Bioterrorism Act and the changes it will bring to the food industry,

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association recognized a number of cattle producers and other beef industry movers at the annual banquet here last week. The event launched this year's Pennsylvania Beef Expo that took place in State College March 27-30.

The association named four beef producers and three others for their unique service to the industry.

Sam Hayes, former Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, was

The annual Lancaster Farming Animal Health and Housing Book is included this issue. The book focuses on herd health and odor control, including silo safety management and nutrient management planning.

Time To 'Spring Forward'

With the arrival of spring comes Daylight Saving Time.

The good news for farmers: days get longer and the nights shorten.

It's time to "spring forward" to Daylight Saving Time, which begins tomorrow. We "spring forward" one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 6.

Turn your clocks ahead one hour before going to bed tonight. Remember to adjust animal feeding and milking schedules accordingly.

Compared to Thursday, slaughter steers sold as much as .50 higher on Monday, trading steady on Tuesday. Monday's supply included some well-finished steers that were in good condition and sold accordingly. On Tuesday, the bulk of the steers were weighing up pretty full, and even though the prices quoted are steady, prices will likely be higher in the meat. Bidding was moderately active, with all grades having no problem finding a truck to ride on. Slaughter Holstein steers sold steady to firm due to what continues to be very good demand. The slaughter heifer supply was very light, and a trend was not fully established. However, the few on hand did trend with a firmer undertone. Lean slaughter cows sold steady to instances of .50 lower, with the fleshier (75-85 percent lean) supply trading 1.00 to as much as 2.00 lower. Beside the few standouts in the Breaking cow supply; bids are pretty much contained under 43.00. There were not enough slaughter bulls on offer to adequately test the market. The supply included 42 percent steers (320 head), 5 percent heifers (38 head), 49 percent cows (375 head), 2 percent bulls (13 head), with the balance of the two day run made up of a few feeder cattle. All prices and trends are recorded from the Monday and Tuesday sale and then combined. Therefore, averages are also a combination of both days. Note: There will be a special feeder cattle sale held at the Vintage Sales Stables on Monday April the 21st after the fat cattle sale, with some good consignments of quality feeders expected. Slaughter Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1110-1455 lbs 76.75-80.75, average 78.85, up to 81.50 on Monday. Yield Grade 2 1150-1500 lbs 45.50-47.00, low dressing 44.00.

Calves: Compared to last Tuesday, slaughter calves sold steady. Holstein bulls going into special-fed veal barns sold weak to 12.00 lower, with instances of sharply lower prices on the lighter bulls. Finished prices remain at around 185.00-192.00, which most consider bearish. Holstein heifers sold sharply higher as prices broke through the 300.00 barrier. Buyer attendance and demand were both good on the heifers. The supply included 580 in the state graded sale, with around 86 percent of the graded supply returning to feed.

Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold 1.00 to mostly 2.00 higher in very active trading. Bidding turned active after the first good set walked through the door and didn't let up until the sale was over There was a very good supply of high quality, long-fed fats on offer, with high Choice and Prime buyers showing right away they were not afraid to still pay over 80 00. The finished market may be showing some bearish indicators this summer, but cattle feeders are going to enjoy it while they can as the majority of the cattlemen that attended Thursday's run were sporting ear to ear grins. This makes the second consecutive week that the New Holland Sales Stables was able to put together steer runs that included over 650 head Which is pretty impressive considering the supply was starting to run a little thin in Lancaster County, and it is extremely impressive that the quality is very good considering many area producers are feeling the effect of the dry summer of 2002 as their corn and silage supplies are all but diminished The slaughter Holstein supply was a little mixed, but still trended near steady Slaughter heifers were hard to come by early in the week, so the late week supply was not well tested However, a firmer undertone was noted Slaughter cows sold steady to mostly 1 00 higher, with even more strength present on the fleshy cows at times Slaughter bulls sold with a higher undertone when compared to Tuesday's very light showing. The reported supply included 45 percent steers (685 head), 4 percent heifers (72 head), 31 percent cows (482 head), 6 percent bulls (104 head), with the balance feeder cattle.

NEW HOLLAND, PA
Report Supplied By Auction

Receipts: 200 early Last Week: 1271 Last Year: 746. Compared to last week, barrows and gilts sold mostly a full 1.00 lower on those that were comparable. The early run quality was extremely mixed, with bidding following the quality. There was, however, a pretty good run of quality hogs mid-morning with bidding picking up to moderate; although prices were unable to match last week's market. All hogs are sold by the pound, with actual weights.

National Broiler Market At A Glance

Atlanta, Ga.
April 2, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

Trade sentiment was barely steady in the West, barely steady to weak in the Midwest, about steady elsewhere. Retail demand was slow to fair with few features. Food service was also slow to at times moderate into fast food for promotions. Supplies were mixed, ranging better balanced in some locations, to ample on heavier weights. In the parts structure, trading was light. Tenders were close balanced to well cleared and moving best, and the remaining parts were at least adequate or available with limited interest. In production areas, live supplies were moderate. Weights were light to heavy, mostly desirable to heavy.

CUSHIONED EGG

Electronic Drives
The innovative, electronically-controlled drive system enables eggs to be transported at a smooth, continuous speed on an endless conveyor with drive units located intermittently up to 150' apart.

Optimum Rod Spacing
Space between each cushioned rod is the key to egg separation and preventing smaller eggs from slipping through the conveyor while allowing all debris to be sifted out.

Design Flexibility
The unique "Cushioned Rod" egg conveyor enables you to custom design a system that gently transports eggs up, down, around corners and in a continuous straight line without transfer, and even declines to match processing equipment.

Custom Corners

ROD CONVEYOR TRANSPORT SYSTEM

Uni-Trac Construction
The "Cushioned Rod" egg conveyor is setting industry standards for efficiency. flexibility and cost savings with a unified construction design that eliminates the problems of egg transfer.

Rol-Link Chain System
An endless, custom designed, roller chain system and flexible cushioned plastic rods, cradle eggs in a gentle position that helps eliminate collisions and breakage.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids were slightly higher for the day, supported mostly by sharply higher soybean trading. Early fund buying in wheat pits offered some strength to bids. Poor export showings so far this week and continued good weather, limited advances. Corn bids were on both sides of steady with higher bean bids and Tuesdays export purchase pulling upwards. However, favorable weather conditions weighed on bids. Soybean bids moved sharply higher due to Spains overnight export purchase and fund buying on the Board. Higher soybean meal trades also boosted bean bids. Tomorrow, USDAs weekly export inspection figures will be released. Soybean purchases for the year have improved over the past few weeks. Wheat 1 to 6 cents higher. Corn mixed, mostly steady to 1 cent higher. Sorghum 1 cent higher. Soybeans 12 to 13 cents higher.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

APRIL 7–13, 2003

WHO?

This week begins with World Health Day (April 7), started in 1948 by who else but the World Health Organization (WHO) First founded as a specialized agency of the United Nations (although not all its members had to belong to the United Nations), WHO has had remarkable success in checking global outbreaks of polio, leprosy, tuberculosis, malaria, and cholera Much of its work has been in the areas of prevention, improved sanitation and hygiene, and more-effective quarantine precautions So go wash your hands and give a salute to health and WHO Prevention is better than cure.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Olive oil is a good skin cleanser for grease, tar, and grimy dirt. Add sugar as an abrasive, if necessary, then rinse.

CARROTS WITH GRAPES

2 pounds fresh carrots
2 teaspoons dried basil
1 clove garlic
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
1 teaspoon dried chervil
1/4 teaspoon celery salt
2 cups seedless white grapes, halved

Clean carrots and cut into julienne strips In a saucepan, combine carrots, basil, and garlic, add water to cover, and cook for about 20 minutes or until tender While carrots are cooking, melt butter in a saucepan and add chervil and celery salt When carrots are cooked, drain, discard garlic Add carrots and grapes to butter, stir to coat, and heat just until grapes are warm Serve as a side dish with chicken or turkey

Makes 12 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

After the rain cometh the fair weather

A soft dropping April brings milk to cows and sheep.

Heat with Corn!

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE
The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved.

OPINION

Making The Most Of Conflict

For too long, perhaps too many of us have pushed aside the idea of making any good use of conflict. Many readers think conflict should be avoided in all matters and at all cost.

But those who work on developing public policy, including many of today's community movers and shakers, think otherwise.

Just this week, Penn State conducted a special hands-on public conflict workshop at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. More than a dozen community leaders met to iron out ways to organize and constructively use conflict and make the most out of situations involving conflicts between parties. These parties could be developers and farmers, farmers and township boards, environmentalists and industry, and all the various combinations in between.

More than a dozen planning commission members, school board officials, township board members, and agri-industry representatives learned a lot about how people behave in conflicts, how to react to that behavior in a positive, constructive way, and how to use time-honored skills to resolve conflicts in a systematic fashion that benefits everyone.

That's a tall task!

We were reminded of an article that appeared in a professional journal in 1989. The title centered on "cutting-edge trends" in Training and Development Journal. Gordon Lippitt, an expert in this field, noted, "The goal of organizational leadership is not to eliminate conflict, but to use it."

Conflict, Lippitt noted, is "predictable and should be channeled for useful purposes."

Communities that don't embrace and use conflict resolution are dying, according to experts. Without conflict, relationships can actually be destroyed. The successful communities, we are told, anticipate conflict and work on it to the extent by looking at the most critical area — keeping relationships intact.

We learned that the actual process, as complex as it sometimes can be, is so important to conflict resolution. Those who try to resolve conflicts must listen carefully, must address interests over simple positions, must learn to logically get to the heart of issues by bringing everything to the bargaining table, and must learn patience.

The critical component by far is listening — making sure the needs of parties in a conflict resolution remain paramount.

For more information about conflict management and resolution, contact Tim Collins, extension agent, community and economic development, Adams County, (717) 334-6271.

To Apply Asparagus Herbicides

With the snow gone and the days getting longer and warmer, the first asparagus spears will be appearing before long. If you have not already mowed off last years ferns, do it as soon as you can get into the field. Then the field will be ready to apply preemergence herbicides.

A number of herbicides are available to assist the commercial grower. It is important to know the weed species that have been problems in the past and then choose herbicide combinations most suited to your particular fields.

Available products that control broadleaf weeds include Karmex, Lorox, Sencor, Lexone, and Sinbar. Products that control grasses include Devrinol and Sinbar. Since these preemergence herbicides need to be incorporated, irrigate after application if no rain occurs within 24 hours of application. For more details, check the 2003 Commercial Vegetable Production Recommendations book available from your local county extension office.

To Extend The Growing Season With High Tunnels

High tunnels are simple unheated greenhouses designed to reduce environmental extremes during the early spring and late fall growing season. The most common application of high tunnels to vegetable production is the use of the structures to extend the cropping period for warm-season vegetable crops such as tomato, pepper, eggplant, cucumbers, and summer squash.

Penn State Horticultural specialists William J. Lamont and Michael Orzolek suggest the following tips for using this tool to increase your horticultural profits.

They suggest the keys to successful production in high tunnels for horticultural crops are crop scheduling and ventilation. When planting crops in the spring in high tunnels, it is generally recommended that you transplant the vegetable crop about 4-6 weeks earlier compared to your earliest planting date in the field on bare ground. In most regions of Pennsylvania, this means that growers can establish warm season high tunnel crops during April, rather than May.

However, there is considerable variation in acceptable planting dates as a result of geographic location within the state. The inherent differences in regional microclimate across Pennsylvania suggest that it is important that growers be conservative in setting out early plantings.

Even if plants survive colder temperatures, certain physiological disorders can result from transplant stress that can significantly impact vegetable yield and quality. Two examples are "buttoning" in broccoli and cauliflower and "cat-facing" in tomato. Both of these physiological disorders result from temperature stress following transplanting. When selecting a transplant date, it is therefore important to bear in mind that survival does not necessarily equal success.

If unusually cold night temperatures are experienced several days to weeks after planting the vegetable crop in the high tunnel, a portable propane heater that burns cleanly can be placed in the high tunnel until more seasonal temperatures return to the location.

The most critical component of the system is ventilation (high tunnels are placed in the field perpendicular to prevailing wind direction). Ventilation is accomplished by rolling up the sides of the tunnel to the batten boards, approximately 4 to 5 feet in height on each side of the tunnel.

Maintaining optimum growing conditions inside the high tunnel without having extreme fluctuations in temperature will guarantee early, high yielding, and high quality horticultural crops. Checking high tunnel internal temperature several times a day will help insure crop yields and profitability.

Select both tomato and pepper varieties that have a determinant or compact growth habit since placing plants in high tunnels that are not well ventilated can cause them to be infected with powdery mildew. Smaller plants will enable greater air movement through the high tunnel, removing both heat and moisture (lowering relative humidity). Both tomato and pepper plants are produced more efficiently on raised beds with plastic mulch and drip irrigation. Because of the width and height of high tunnels, a smaller, modified plastic mulch layer has been designed for use in high tunnels.

After transplanting tomatoes, it is recommended that the plants be staked using the Florida weave system. If the sides of the high tunnel are rolled up during flower development, the wind will act as a pollinator, resulting in fruit set; no additional pollination methods will be required. Begin scouting for pest problems within seven days of transplanting the tomato or pepper plants, especially scouting for thrips, aphids, and whiteflies. If populations of any of these insect pests exceed threshold levels, introduce appropriate predators at recommended rates.

The only disease that has been a problem in high tunnel tomato production is powdery mildew. Use of resistant varieties or application of labeled fungicides will control mildew problems. For more details on high tunnel production, contact your county extension office.

This is a note of encouragement for the people of the USA — encouragement in this time of war, not negativism. We should be rooting for the men and women who are risking their lives to keep America free, and helping others to be free who are now in bondage.

We should be standing up for the U.S. and her efforts to help a world that is in danger of being overtaken.

In history, think of all the men and women who gave their blood, sweat, and tears so that we could live in peace and prosperity all these years.

Those of you in rose-colored glasses who poke fun at these loyal efforts — take off the glasses and see all. Write your songs of encouragement.

God will fight for us if we stand together.

The Harrisburg Farm Show certainly did get bigger and better this year. There were new things to see and taste and the shuttle worked great.

Although there were almost no machinery salesman or literature on the last days, the show was not crowded.

One thing that has not changed is the lack of seating, or a table to eat at. People just sat down on the hard, rough floor. It would be nice to see some tables and chairs next year.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE GRAND UPSETTER

Background Scripture:
Mark 11:1 through 12:12.
Devotional Reading:
Luke 19:28-40.7.

The people of Jesus' day would probably be aghast at his benign popularity in our time. His name rolls off the tongues of multitudes, he is represented in beatific art as the "gentle Jesus, meek and mild," and his name is spread obligingly over all manner of things and causes founded on something other than the gospel.

The people of his own day would be surprised because, friend and foe alike, they saw him as the Grand Upsetter. Jesus was not opposed by the scribes and Pharisees because he differed somewhat from their legalism. He was persona non grata with the priests and Sadducees, not because his presence graced the temple. Even his disciples had experienced how his life and teaching could turn their lives upside down.

His first day started off unobtrusively. Jesus sent two his disciples to Bethphage, a town on the outskirts of Jerusalem, to find and bring to him a colt to ride into the Holy City. Why a colt? This was an allusion to Zechariah 9:9, depicting the coming of a king both triumphant and humble, an image particularly appropriate for Jesus, who embodied both in his ministry and upset some of the popular Messianic expectations.

The Lord Has Need Of It

If asked, "Why are you doing this?" they are to answer, "The Lord has need of it. . . ." "And they told them what Jesus had said; and they let them go" (11:3-5).

We do not know if this was something that Jesus had prearranged, but when the owners of the colt realized Jesus had need of it, they acquiesced. Wouldn't it be wonderful if, in our lives, we could let go of this or that because we understand "the Lord has need of it?" Our money, our abundance of material goods, our superfluity of food and drink, our resources?

I deeply regret that ecology has become an ideological issue between conservatives and liberals, the haves and the have-nots. The stewardship of this good earth that God created and has put in our care is basically not a political issue but a spiritual one at the very deepest level. That is not a matter of being liberal or conservative, but obedience to God the Creator who "has need of it."

Again, we do not know how much or little of Palm Sunday was planned, if any, but it was an upsetting phenomenon. What could be so wrong about a quiet, orderly religious procession? For the priests and Sadducees, what was wrong was that it took place without their approval. They were the ones who decided what was spiritually correct and incorrect, but Jesus and his disciples had not even asked for a parade permit.

A Den Of Robbers

Most upsetting of all, however, is what happened the next day. This unauthorized, unorthodox rabble-rouser dared to come into the temple court and literally drive out the money changers and those who sold sacrificial pigeons there.

His words were even more of an affront to them, the legally constituted temple authorities: "Is it not written, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations'? But you have made it a den of robbers" (11:17).

Certainly Jesus could have soft-pedaled this issue some. He could have said, "There are some things going on here that are not what they should be."

Commentators today wonder why Jesus chose such harsh words and action. It is reasoned that the money changers performed a valuable service, making it possible for worshipers to change their money into coinage approved for use in the temple. Those who sold pigeons were simply providing worshipers with an opportunity to buy the prescribed animal sacrifice. One can rationalize all these activities, but Jesus condemned them, not because they rendered a service, but because they let commercialism take over.

With his Palm Sunday record, I'm not certain we'd like to see Jesus enter our churches on this or any other Sunday. One would have to be wondering: what is there here that Jesus would upset?

So the next time that you explicitly or implicitly invite Jesus to come into your life, maybe you ought to first ask yourself what would happen if you let the Grand Upsetter into your house of cards.

PIT POWER

Farmers and composters - Here is a breakdown for compost and manure pits and manure piles! Pit Power is bacteria and bacteria feeders that break down solids in manure pits and septic tanks and breakdown compost faster.

Clean out your pit with ease, use Pit Power! One gallon of Pit Power per 10,000 to 20,000 gal of pit volume. Should be repeated approx. 2 times a year! If aeration of the pit is possible, it will help the bacteria to grow and work faster to break down solids. Pit Power's purpose is to add life (bacteria) in the manure, which then is returned to the soil where a bacteria is working. The smell of pit manure is not so strong Pit Power is a non-toxic product - Life to Feed Life!

Price is $58.00 per gallon
(6 gal or more - $55 per gallon). Full UPS fee will be charged if payment is not with order Send orders to

DAIRY PRODUCTS HEAD FOR THE CCC

- Butter entering the CCC.
- Cheese still below support.
- Market outlook.

This week marks a turning point in the dairy price support program. For the first time in many years, surplus butter, nonfat dry milk, and cheese — all three dairy products — are moving into Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) storage. For the week ending March 28, the CCC purchased 1,134,611 pounds of butter, 2,734,876 pounds of cheese, and 10,635,864 pounds of nonfat dry milk.

The good news is that this movement of surplus inventory into the CCC will help support Class III and IV milk prices. The bad news is that this inventory in government storage will over hang the market, extending the period of low milk prices.

Market cheese prices in Chicago continued to fall below support levels. For the week of March 24-28, the block cheese price averaged $1.0840 per pound, below the support price of $1.1314 per pound. This of course frustrates dairy producers who understand that the dairy price support program is designed to return a Class III value above $9.80 per CWT. The dairy futures contracts for Class III are estimating a Class III price of $9.10 per CWT for March 2003.

The reason for these low cash market prices is because most cheese processors are set up to furnish cheese to real commercial customers. It is a significant change to their operations to suddenly ship dairy products to a USDA storage cite. The packaging, inspection, transportation, and financing are all different. Hence many processors try to avoid this transaction. The result has been falling wholesale prices for cheese.

Butter prices remain a nickel a pound above support, however. Grade AA butter averaged $1.0908 per pound for the week ending March 28. This is a bit surprising given the enormous inventory of butter in commercial warehouses. Nonetheless, we are approaching the Easter/Passover Holidays and demand for butter strengthens.

The outlook still looks uncertain. It appears that March will be the low point for Class III prices for the year. One must identify the bottom before prices will improve. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange futures markets are expecting milk prices to improve thereafter. Still, there are many uncertainties, including:

- What impact will the Iraqi conflict have on the dairy industry?
- How long before this conflict will be resolved?
- Will consumer confidence improve thereafter?
- Will U.S. business activity improve?

This industry needs growth in the general economy.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.3853-1.4944. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.3744-1.4944 mostly 1.3962-1.4617.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9000-.9800; Class III - spot prices - .7400-.8000.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This Week: In 0, Out 106; Last Week: In 0, Out 42; Last Year: In 0, Out 69. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week: In 0, Out 0; last week: In 0, Out 0; last year: In 0, Out 0.

Milk production is showing more increases across the region. Gains are most noticeable in the Southeast where contacts state that the milk flow is "up all over." Milk output is just starting to increase in the Northeast where the weather is still more winter-like than spring-like. Fluid milk supplies are abundant for the slow to fair Class I demand. The "snow birds" are heading north and bottled milk sales are down accordingly in Florida and other Gulf Coast "wintering spots." Also, some schools are on spring break this week. Farther north, Class I milk sales heavier this week. Effective this week, a new agreement between handlers puts in place new operational changes which will more efficiently handle the milk and more accurately reflect Florida's milk utilization. Southeastern manufacturing plants that are operating are nearly full. Some plants have been taking in intra-company shipments from the Southwest.

In the Northeast, surplus milk supplies are heavier at some butter/powder plants Slow Class I sales and self-induced slow downs at some mozzarella plants are pushing more milk into other plants. The condensed skim market is mixed Contract sales are clearing normal volumes, but spot sales are lagging earlier levels Reports indicate that Midwestern buyers of Class III wet solids are finding Western loads at better prices Most of the extra condensed skim that is no longer clearing to the Midwest is being dried

The fluid cream market is seeing some improvement this week Spot prices are both higher and lower. The CME butter average did fall about a half cent last week, but multiples were often higher in response to improved demand. Buying interest improved with better spot sales into ice cream, soft serve mix, bottling, and cream cheese plants. Some of the smaller ice cream producers are now on full schedules while large operation have been running quiet full for some time. Ice cream mix makers have been very busy and most have purchased extra or spot loads of cream this week. Cream bottlers have stepped up production for the brief Easter/Passover boost to demand. Churning activity is steady.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Friday, March 28, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER SUMMARY for week ending Mar. 28 — Total Receipts: 320,200; last week 347.600. Direct 69.000; last week 62,300, last year 46,100. Video/Internet 0; last week 25,400, last year 33,000. Auctions 251,200; last week 259,900, last year 202,800. This weeks reported auction volume included 48 percent over 600 lbs and 44 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers sold steady to 3.00 higher, several instances calves 2.00 to 5.00 higher. This according to USDA Livestock and Grain Market News. Last week's bullish Cattle on Feed Report with declining marketings, more moisture and green pastures all combined to spur demand. Kinds to turn out on grass showed the most price advances.

Finished cattle in the direct feedlot trade sold steady on the hoof at 78.00 and 1.00 higher in the beef at 126.00 to 127.00. Boxed beef cutouts at only 127.00 and this put slaughter operating margins at a big loss. However, packers made big purchases this week as feedlots are very current and Choice offerings in short supply. There is a 9.00 price spread between Choice and Select cutouts. This supported by a drop of 8 lbs in average slaughter weights and the average is 10 lbs under a year ago.

Total beef production this week 5.3 percent below a week ago. Reduced cattle kills are due to the red ink, only 629,000 this week. This is the season of the year when beef production usually picks up with the five year weekly slaughter averages during spring often in the 675,000 to 710,000 range.

This looks promising for the increased tonnage in cold storage. However, the board does not offer that much hope. April Futures are now at a 3.00 discount to the live trade and quotes for August are down to 67.10. Recent rains and big snow storms have been a blessing in many areas but large sections of the country are still in draught conditions. Corn prices are .40 cents a bushel above a year ago. Majority of the dry areas are hay and grassland. Ranchers are reluctant to take on a full load of grazing stock or replace the reduced numbers of mama cows. Good prices and a couple of wet years are needed to get herd rebuilding in high gear.

Slaughter Cattle Weekly Review

Oklahoma City, Okla.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL SLAUGHTER CATTLE SUMMARY — Week Ending March 28, 2003 — Slaughter cattle traded steady on a live basis and firm dressed. Sellers readily moved cattle Thursday at steady prices despite early resolve to hold for higher market. The large discount on the April CME slaughter cattle contract was more hurdle than sellers wished to tackle. Good movement will set up a stronger sales position next week than the April board would indicate. Packers received some minor help from beef prices as negative margins have been a problem.

Slaughter remains fairly strong for the season as labor economics require operating at negative figures if needed. Boxed beef prices Friday a.m. averaged 122.44 up .94 from last Friday. Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades totaled 185,800 through 10:00 a.m. Friday. Last week's full count was 166,800.

STEERS AND HEIFERS: MIDWEST DIRECT MARKETS: Live Basis: 35-80 percent Choice, 900-1400 lbs 77.00-79.00, wtd avg 78.33. Dressed Basis: 35-80 percent Choice, 550-950 lbs. 124.00-127.50, wtd avg 126.40. HIGH PLAINS DIRECT MARKETS: Live [illegible] 77.00-78.50, wtd avg 78.02.

SLAUGHTER COWS AND BULLS (Average Yielding): Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 2.00 higher. Packer demand much improved as auction numbers return to seasonally light supplies and spring beef demand ratchets up. USDA's Cutter cow carcass cut-out value Friday a.m. was 82.11 down 2.78 from last Friday.

COWS: Breakers 75-80% Lean 1000-1600 lb: Colorado 39.00-42.50; Oklahoma 39.00-41.50; Alabama 35.00-38.00. Boners 80-85% Lean 900-1500 lb: Colorado 40.00-43.00; Oklahoma 39.50-42.00; Alabama 36.00-38.00. Lean 85-90% Lean 850-1400 lb: Colorado 38.50-41.50; Oklahoma 37.50-40.50; Alabama 31.00-34.00.

BULLS: 88-92% Lean 1500-2200 lb: Colorado 51.00-53.50; Oklahoma 47.50-51.00; Alabama 45.00-51.00.

Cattlemen's Association

feted for his contributions to the state's cattle business, especially for his key role in promoting and building a new Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture meat animal evaluation center near State College.

The recently completed facility has been named the Sam Hayes Livestock Evaluation Center.

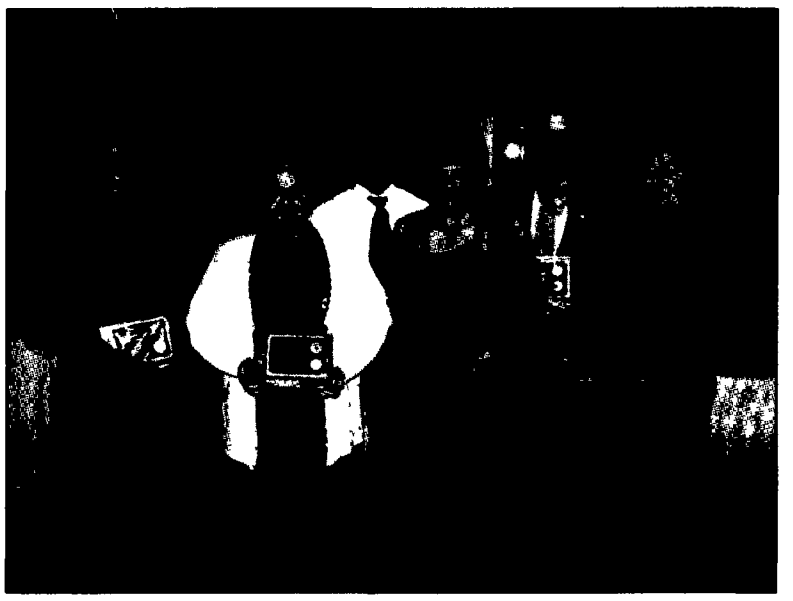
Glenn Eberly, in his 17th year as director of the Livestock Evaluation Center, received this year's Special Appreciation Award.

Eberly helped initiate the Pennsylvania Beef Expo and has chaired the Beef Expo committee for all of its 14 years.

Along with his wife Dorothy and son David, Eberly maintains a 40-50 purebred Angus cow herd that he has been building over the past 25 years.

Eberly's past beef industry involvements include acting as president and vice president of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association and serving more than 20 years as a director. He has served on a number of other boards as well, including the Pennsylvania Beef Council and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association. He also judges beef at several county and state fairs, and has served many years as a 4-H leader.

Don and Carol Cook of Tower Advertising, Dillsburg, were recognized for their longtime support of the junior show at the Pennsylvania Beef Expo.



From left, Susan Smerick of Pioneer; Bunk Smith, organizer; Rosina Martz, gift basket designer; Perry Smith, Seltzer's; Julia Marsh, gift basket designer; William Piper, deputy director of the Pennsylvania Farm Show; and Natalie Stare, Seltzer's, were recognized for their help with the banquet and Beef Expo.

Natushka Shoemaker of Bedford County received the Industry Service Award for her accomplishments as secretary of the Pennsylvania Simmental Association.

During the past seven years, Shoemaker has been busy on a number of fronts, promoting Simmentals and the beef industry as a whole. Her work has included lobbying the state government on issues such as animal health and being active as a certified beef quality assurance member. She has also assisted junior and senior exhibitors of all beef breeds at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Allyn and Patricia Myers of Alpat Acres, York County, won this year's Commercial Cattleman Award.

Married in 1960, the Myers have maintained a highly productive commercial cow herd for many years. Patricia recently passed away.

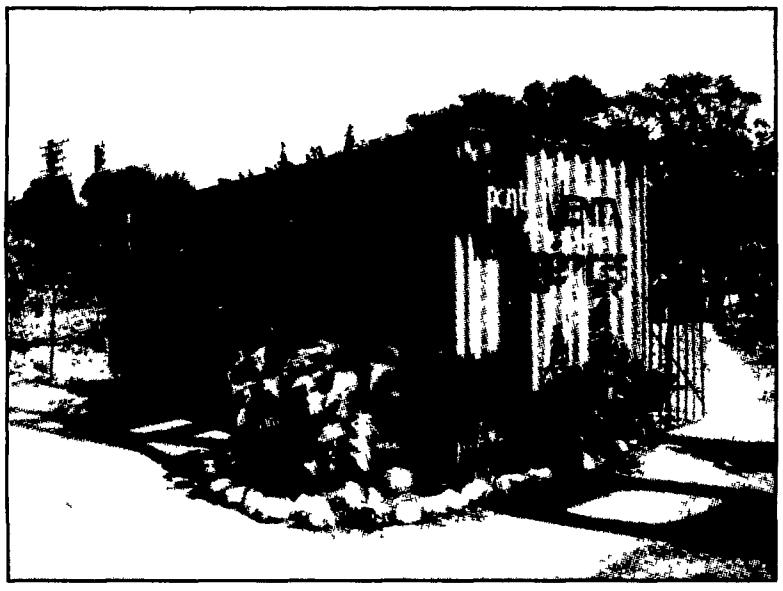
For 18 months now, agricultural specialists across the U.S. have vigorously debated the level of terrorism threat faced by our nation's farmers and food supply. At the recent annual conference of the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), we heard from scientists who argued persuasively that the threat of accidental contamination of food is as great, if not greater than the risk of intentional sabotage.

Incidents occurring since September 11, 2001 involving widespread distribution of contaminated food, here in Pennsylvania and elsewhere, have confirmed the correctness of this more complex description of the problem.

But the question remains, "What would happen in the United States if our food supply was suddenly interrupted, whether by accidental or intentional causes, requiring an extended period of recovery?"

Fortunately for us in this country, we have a very close neighbor that has faced such a situation, and from whom we might learn some important lessons.

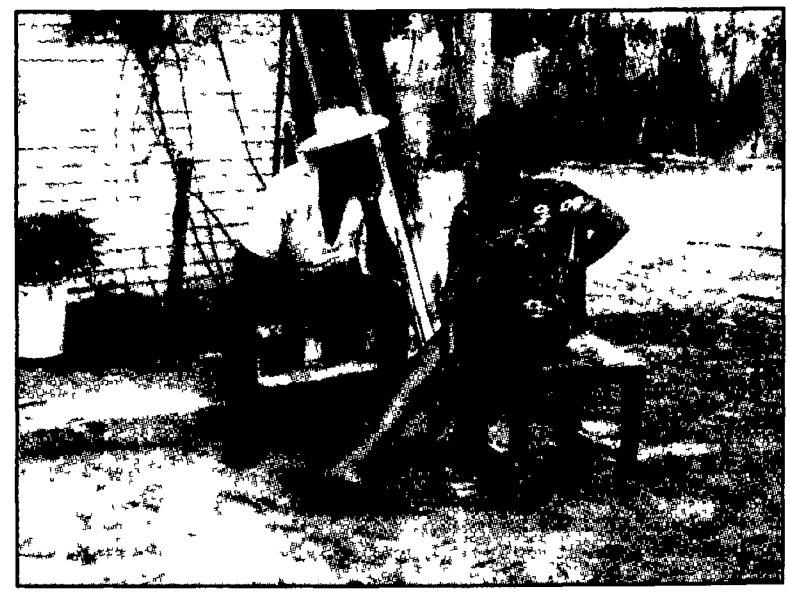


Curbside farm stand in Havana belonging to a farmer named "America." Design using an old railroad car shows necessary resourcefulness of Cuban farmers. Urban farmers produce over 350 thousand tons of fruits and vegetables within the city limits of Havana each year.

Over a two-week period bridging February and March of this year, I was fortunate to be a part of what has been called the "largest ever fact-finding delegation destined for Cuba." As a delegation of three from Pennsylvania, I was joined by Penn State IPM specialist Lyn Garling and Tim Bowser, executive director of the FoodRoutes Network (Millheim), as part of a dynamic group of about 90 food and farming specialists from all over the United States, Latin America, and those living in the Caribbean on a study tour of Cuban agriculture. The trip was organized by the Oakland California based Food First/Institute for Food and Development Policy.

Following the 1959 revolution in Cuba, the socialist regime that emerged was forced into a mostly exclusive trading relationship with the Soviet Union, in large part because of the U.S. trade embargo, which is now more than 40 years old. Cuba traded sugar, tobacco, nickel and other products for fuel, food and medicine, as well as the feedstuffs, chemicals, and equipment necessary to maintain widespread conventional agriculture throughout this island nation.

This close trading partnership worked pretty well, helping Cuba to resist the U.S. embargo, or "blockade" as Cubans refer to it, for 30 years, until the sudden fall of the Soviet Union beginning in 1989. Almost overnight, Cuban society lost access not only to much of its food supply, but also to the conventional means of producing their own food. Suddenly, there were no chemicals or fertilizers, no new tractors or spare parts to repair the old ones, and no veterinary medicines or feed concentrates to support their concentrated dairy, poultry, and pork production facilities.



A Cuban fruit farmer and his wife, who hosted a group from the delegation for a visit at their home. Everywhere it was clear how proud these folks are of what they had achieved and how glad they were to receive us. Departing comments were often mingled with tears.

The situation for Cuban citizens worsened when the U.S., sensing perhaps an opportunity to bring about a new capitalist counterrevolution, tightened the embargo with legislation in 1992 (Torricelli) and again in 1996 (Helms-Burton). And this legislative one-two punch might have achieved its intended result were it not for the ongoing revolutionary spirit of the Cuban people in the face of tremendous adversity.

In fact, the seeds of agricultural change were present throughout the first 30 years following the Revolution. We were reminded on the trip that agrarian reform had always been a priority of the current regime. From the beginning, the socialist government had sought to guarantee adequate food for every man, woman, and child in Cuba as a birthright.

Furthermore, the desire had been to supply as much of this food as possible through production using fewer chemicals on smaller farms or farm cooperatives located close to where people actually live. This effort, referred to as "sustainable agriculture" long before any crisis occurred, is defined in Cuba, much the same as in our own country, as a widespread network of carefully managed farms that are economically viable, environmentally sound, and socially responsible.

In response to the crisis of 1989 and afterwards the Cuban government instituted economic reforms as part of what they euphemistically called the "Special Period in Peacetime." The Special Period, as it is more commonly known, includes incentives for farmers to profit directly from producing more food, especially in the areas where it is most needed. In response to these reforms, the people of this society, with the support of their government and universities, launched a massive campaign to make widespread, diversified, and well-distributed sustainable and organic agriculture a reality.

One major initiative of the Special Period was implementation of urban agriculture, with folks farming their backyards, or bringing new life to abandoned lots or defunct manufacturing sites. We were amazed to find that there is enough organic produce grown within the city limits of Havana to feed each of the city's 2.5 million residents a minimum of 300 grams (about 10 ounces) of fruits and vegetables each day.

Some of the urban farmers we met had left very stable professional careers to engage in agriculture for the first time. For instance, we met a couple, a former veterinarian and chemist respectively, who had originally switched to farming to keep their children fed. They now make considerably more money farming than they had in their former careers, and each of them operates a separate private farm as part of a larger cooperative.

Another strategy has been to divide large, previously state-owned farms into smaller units, or Basic Units of Cooperative Production (UBPC), as they are called. Our group visited one that employed 55 farmers working a total of about eight acres, with each of the farmers earning approximately four times the national average wage (to keep things in perspective, the national average is the equivalent of about $10 U.S. per month). This is achieved despite the fact that such farms must first provide, as part of their social obligation, food for local schools, hospitals, and nursing homes before selling on the open market.

The key to success of urban agriculture in Cuba is that the farms are located in the same neighborhoods as their customers. For instance, the UBPC we visited maintains a modest roadside stand that serves between 4,000-5,000 people from the local community each day. This particular farm has also diversified its operation to include several value-added products through both nursery sales and a processing kitchen.

A Basic Unit of Cooperative Production (UBPC) on the outskirts of Havana. Eight acres of ground supports 55 farmers at a relatively high standard of living and serves as many as 5,000 people each day. Note that the apartment dwellings of customers are located literally next door to the farm.

In addition to the food-for-schools obligation mentioned above, which basically takes the place of property taxes as we know them, taxes are imposed on direct agricultural sales, though the rate decreases dramatically for produce sold in urban areas. Most Cuban farmers own their land, sometimes collectively, or are engaged in permanent lease

Welcoming Spring With Open Barn Doors

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Even through the precarious weather this winter, construction continued at Flintrock Stables, according to Dan Heller, operations manager at the stables.

In spite of the snowy winter and wet spring — "one challenge after another" — said Heller, the barn was ready to open its doors to equine residents in March.

"It's amazing how well everything turned out in spite of all of that (weather)," said Rick Haller who, along with Dan Heller, is a one of a three-way partnership that also includes Daryl Heller.

The 50-acre farm includes 14 paddocks for turnout.

The stables have opened in time to be a part of the upcoming Horse Farms Open House, April 12-13.

More information on the open house is included at the end of this report.

The stables, a riding and boarding facility, feature a complex with an 80 by 180-foot indoor riding arena. Overlooking the arena is an observation area that will be fitted with a small kitchen and furniture, according to Heller.

A connected horse stables also has 28 stalls. Two tack rooms, two wash stalls, an office, and conference room are also part of the new facility. Additionally, horse owners can make use of a bathroom and shower.

The 50-acre operation includes a sandstone barn built in 1816 and renovated in 2001, providing 12 stalls.

The stable requires the labor of two full-time and a number of part-time employees.

Now that spring has arrived, horse owners will be making more consistent use of the two outdoor arenas. A lighted arena is adjacent to the stone barn, and the new facility features an outdoor area with a jump course. Besides the arenas, two miles of cross country trails are available for riders.

Boarders and riding students come from nearby areas in Lititz, plus areas such as Lancaster, Hershey, Carlisle, Newburg, Shippensburg, Wyomissing, or Reading.

Noel Garman, who lives on site, is the stable manager for the operation, making sure that the day's routines are running smoothly and that the boarders "feel very comfortable with their horses care here," she said.

Garman, who began part-time work in March 2000 and moved to full-time work in February, is enjoying living on site with the horses since "I can always keep my eye on everything," she said. The 24-hour supervision, she believes, is a big plus at the facility.

Her job focus is day-to-day horse care, which includes feeding and turnout schedules, however in addition Garman teaches western horsemanship lessons as well as barrel racing and pole bending.

A competitor herself, Garman has received both barrel racing and pole bending world champion titles.

One of the highlights of the farm is the large area available for horse turnout, according to Garman. Once construction is completed, 14 paddocks will be available for horses.

Lending their expertise to the training program is Jerre and Phyllis Frankhouser. The couple takes care of teaching the hunt seat program. In addition to giving lessons to riders — for education and also for competition — they also train horses.

Garman and the Frankhousers may give 50 lessons a week, a "pretty intense lesson program," according to Dan Heller.

Jerre, besides teaching and training, also shows horses and is a USA

Understand New CAFO Regulations

Travis Edwards
Dr. Zhiguo Wu
Penn State

New regulations have been released, but not all farms qualify as a Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO).

However, some farms in Pennsylvania will now need to verify whether or not they fall under the CAFO designation, because a CAFO is now defined by herd size rather than animal units per acre. An additional aspect of the new requirements covers all sizes of dairy operations. Whether you milk 20 or 700 cows, if your farm is found to be in danger of polluting surface waters, your operation may require a CAFO permit.

The new regulations have been handed down from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and they come with no real surprise. This issue has been the topic of conversation within the agricultural sector for quite some time now, especially in the dairy industry, with regards to phosphorus feeding management. The new rules, designed with some flexibility at the state level, are more practical and less costly than the original proposal in December of 2000.

The new guidelines are designed in the interest of cleaner and purer water, while maintaining the viability of agriculture as we know it today. It is a historical combination of effort and interest on the part of the EPA and the USDA. The two agencies have combined to protect national waters from nutrient over-enrichment by combining mandatory and voluntary nutrient management programs, replacing programs that were more than 25 years old, and not adequate to protect water resources.

Some of the new definitions related to dairy operations are as follows.

- Large CAFOs are now defined as a dairy that has at least 700 dairy cows, and/or 1,000 heifers.
- A medium CAFO is defined as one that has at least 200 dairy cows, and/or 300 heifers, as well as a man-made ditch or pipe carrying manure, or animals come into contact with surface water running through the area where they are confined.
- You may also be designated a CAFO if your permitting authority finds that you are adding pollutants to a water body.
- Some rules applying to other aspects of animal production were changed, including eliminating the exemption that excuses CAFOs from applying for permits if they only discharge during large storms; eliminating the exemption for operations that raise chickens with dry manure systems; and extending coverage to immature swine and immature dairy cows. Lastly, the new rule increases public access to information through CAFO annual reports.

You will need to apply to your state permitting authority for a permit if your farm qualifies as a CAFO. All dairy cow or heifer CAFOs must implement a nutrient management plan, submit annual reports to your permitting authority, keep your permit current until you completely close your operation and remove all manure, and keep records of your nutrient management practices for at least five years.

The plan must allow for assuring adequate manure storage capacity, proper handling of dead animals and chemicals, diverting clean water from the production area (area where animals are housed and manure is stored), keeping animals out of surface water using site specific conservation practices, developing ways to test manure and soil, assuring appropriate use of nutrients when you spread manure, and keeping records of your nutrient management practices.

For medium and designated dairy cow or heifer CAFOs, the permitting authority may set additional requirements for your nutrient management plan that will depend on the permit writer's best professional judgment, which could be similar to the requirements for large dairy cow or heifer CAFOs.

Large dairy cow or heifer CAFOs will also be required to design a production area to contain all of manure plus the runoff from a once-in-25-years, 24-hour rainfall event, install depth markers in liquid manure storage structures, inspect your production area weekly and all water lines daily, and correct any problems you find as soon as possible.

Operators must apply manure at rates that meet permitting authority's standards; analyze manure for nutrient content at least once a year; analyze the soil from land application fields for phosphorus content every five years; avoid applying manure to any land within 100 feet of surface water from time to time; inspect land application equipment for leaks; and keep records for at least five years on the date, recipient, amount, and nutrient content of any manure that is transferred to other persons. Information about the nutrient content of your manure must be provided to the recipient of any transferred manure (information from the EPA website, www.epa.gov).

The final addition to national nutrient management laws requires large CAFOs to prepare and implement a site-specific nutrient management plan for manure application. Land application will be based on the nutrient management plan that establishes application rates based on crops needs for the greatest concentration of the limiting nutrients, nitrogen and phosphorus. Soil tests will determine which of those nutrients is present in the greatest concentration, and the plans will revolve around the crop removal of that nutrient.

Approximately 15,500 livestock operations across the country will be affected by the new restrictions. Until now, there were about 4,500 farms covered by permits. With the changes, the EPA expects that number to increase by about 11,000 farms required to apply for permits by the year 2006.

How will this affect the dairy industry? Well, the good news is that the cost of implementing the new program is well below the original estimation of $980 million per year, now estimated at $335 million per year for all animal production facilities. The bad news is that the cost to the national dairy industry will be approximately $150 million for affected producers. Again, that is below what was initially expected. Some of the stricter proposed changes were lessened, and some leniency was allowed at the state level which has reduced the cost of the program.

The somewhat complicated changes will affect about 3,400 dairy producers nationally. Of those, 1,500 have 700 cows or more. The 1,900 smaller operations are located in geographic areas of targeted regulation.

To aid in the cost of implementation, congress increased monies available for land and water conservation programs in the 2002 Farm Bill by $20.9 billion, bringing the total funding for the programs to $51 billion over the next decade.

The Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) was authorized at $200 million in 2002, and is expected to increase to $1.3 billion in 2007. Of these funds, 60 percent must go to livestock operations. Secondly, new technology is being perfected to aid farmers in meeting the new rules. Technologies in manure management, such as composters and anaerobic digesters are being studied as viable aids in helping producers comply with tighter restrictions.

Another positive aspect of the new regulations is the expected immediate reductions in pollution of surface and ground water. The amount of phosphorus released will be reduced by a projected 56 million pounds, and nitrogen releases by more than 100 million pounds. In addition, the regulations are projected to prevent release of more than two billion pounds of sediments and a million pounds of metals.

When these reductions are made public, it will enhance the nation's agricultural image of land stewardship and concern for the environment. While it may cause initial setbacks and adaptation for our industry, it will also secure it as a permanent, viable part of our economy.

As an industry, we have already been making changes and moving toward the regulations that have recently been proposed. Over-supplementation of nutrients such as nitrogen, and more recently, phosphorus, has been on the forefront of dairy news and research. There has been a nationwide effort to reduce the amount of these nutrients excreted in dairy manure. This idea was spurred by the expectation that the new regulations were forthcoming. Because our industry has been proactive in adopting such practices, we are well-positioned to deal with the new rules.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

LEARNING ABOUT MEXICAN HOLIDAYS
Vinton E. Smith
Dairy Management Agent
Capitol Region

You might first ask yourself, "Why is this guy who works with dairy farms writing about Mexican holidays?" Well, it is quite an interesting story.

About five years ago, I was working with dairy farms in central New York, many of which were employing Mexican and other Latin American workers. At that time, I knew very little about the workers' cultural background. However, I realized that there was a growing need for training programs to help the workers and farm owners to be more successful. Hence, my interest really began to grow.

Since that time, I have been involved with many different programs that have broadened my perspective and understanding of the Mexican culture. These include coordinating a milker training school in Spanish, facilitating four Spanish For Dairymen classes with 48 farm owners or employees, and I helped to develop and coordinate four "Managing the Hispanic Workforce" conferences.

Now my family and I live and work in Adams County, an area with a growing Mexican and Latin American population. Visiting with and leaning about our Latino neighbors has been a very rewarding and enriching experience!

One of the most interesting things I have learned about the Mexican culture is their appreciation of traditional and religious "das festivos" or holidays. Here are highlights of a few of the most important:

• Semana Santa. Semana Santa or Holy Week celebrates the Christian holiday of Easter and runs from Palm Sunday to Easter Sunday. Since about 90 percent of Mexicans are Catholic, attending Mass on Good Friday and Easter Sunday are typical traditions. This is also a time that Mexicans enjoy celebrating with their families and communities.

• Cinco de Mayo. The Cinco de Mayo or "The Fifth of May" commemorates Mexico's victory over the French in The Battle of Puebla in 1862. France had invaded the Gulf Coast of Mexico with their army of 6,500 well-prepared soldiers. They were in route to Mexico City when they were defeated by a smaller, poorly outfitted Mexican army of 4,500 that was lead by Mexican General Ignacio Zaragoza Seguin. The victory was a splendid moment for the Mexican people. However, Napoleon sent 30,000 more troops and was eventually able to defeat the Mexican army, take over Mexico City, and install French rule over Mexico. This only lasted a few years, ending as the U.S began providing more political and military assistance to Mexico. Even though the French did eventually defeat Mexico, Cinco de Mayo honors the bravery of General Zaragoza's small, outnumbered militia at the Battle of Puebla.

• Mexican Independence Day. Mexican Independence Day is celebrated on Sept. 16 and commemorates the start of the battle for independence from Spain. Early on the morning of Sept. 16, 1810, Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, a Catholic priest in the village of Dolores, delivered "El Grito de Dolores." This "Cry of Dolores" was "Mexicanos, Viva Mexico!" and was directed toward the Indian and mestizo people who had been exploited by the Spaniards. Hidalgo's cry inspired the revolution and he became known as the father of Mexican independence.

• Da de los Muertos. The "Day of the Dead" celebrations take place on Nov. 1 and 2, All Saints Day and All Souls Day, respectively. This tradition stems from ancient indigenous people of Mexico who believed that the souls of the dead "return" to be with the living every year. While the celebration varies across different regions of Mexico, the festivities often begin with families fixing up the graves of deceased relatives and even building elaborate altars at the cemeteries. One candle is placed for each dead soul. The altars are often decorated with marigolds (the traditional flower of the dead), mementos, photos and other remembrances of the dead. They celebrate by eating traditional foods such as "pan de muerto" (bread of the dead) and favorite foods of their deceased relatives.

• Da de Nuestra Seora de Guadalupe. The "Virgin of Guadalupe Day" is in honor of Mexico's patron saint and is celebrated on Dec. 12. The history of this holiday dates back to 1531 when Juan Diego was crossing a barren hill called Tepeyac Hill to attend Mass. Suddenly, he was stopped by a bright light and the sound of heavenly music. Then a beautiful dark-skinned woman declared herself to be the Virgin Mary and mother of Jesus Christ. She told Juan Diego of her desire to have a church built on that barren hill and asked him to relay that message to the Bishop. When Diego was finally able to speak to the Bishop, the Bishop asked for proof that this encounter really took place. A few days later, The Virgin once again appeared to Diego on Tepeyac Hill. He explained the Bishop's request. She instructed him to pick roses from the hill, a place where roses didn't typically grow, and deliver them to the Bishop as a sign of this encounter. When Diego laid the roses out for the Bishop, a perfect image of "La Virgen Morena" (the Dark Virgin) was revealed on Juan Diego's cloak. The Bishop then ordered that a small church be built on the site of the "appearance." Today, a much larger Basilica has been built in honor of the "Virgen de Guadalupe." Carefully preserved inside is Juan Diego's miraculous cloak that still has a very clear image of the "Virgen de Guadalupe" imprinted on it. Interestingly, just last year, Pope John Paul II raised Juan Diego to Sainthood.

• Las Posadas y Navidad. Las Posadas is the start of the Christmas season and celebrates Joseph and Mary's search for a room at an inn in Bethlehem. Navidad is similar to our traditional religious Christmas celebration. Navidad is one of the biggest fiestas of the year. People all across Mexico take time off and make spending time with family and friends a priority. One of the biggest traditions is "Las Posadas," which takes place during the 12 days before Christmas and is a procession that grows in numbers as it makes it way to the church. Once at the church, a celebration of mass is held. Then, the adults visit and enjoy everyone's company while the children enjoy playing games and breaking piatas. Overall, Christmas is more then just one day, it truly is a celebration of the Christmas season.

'Moo University' Looks At Cow Health

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Vaccination programs for heifers should start not real early, but at the right time — about 4-6 months of age to get maximum herd health benefits, according to a Penn State veterinarian.

Dr. Arlen Mills noted that modified live vaccines are used to protect the young cow for a host of diseases he reviewed last week at a special beginning and young dairy farmer meeting called "Moo University" at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

Mills, along with Penn State Dairy Agent Beth Grove, spoke to a couple dozen dairy producers and agri-industry representatives at the Penn State event.

The capitol region extension veterinarian, based in Lebanon County, noted how important it is to maintain good biosecurity when using vaccines.

"Don't put a used needle into the bottle of vaccine," he cautioned the young dairy farmers.

He told them that several doses are needed to protect the cow from disease.

"If you use only one dose, the heifer is not vaccinated," Mills said. "You have to follow up with a second dose. Follow the instructions on these items."

Also, it's important not to let the vaccines, especially modified live, to sit in the sun. And don't use a disinfectant in the syringe, because that kills the vaccine.

Mills reviewed various diseases at the "Moo University":

• IBR. Known as infectious bovine rhinotracheitis virus, the agent is a herpes virus that infects through the respiratory system. It causes abortions.

• PI 3. Also called para-influenza, the disease infects the respiratory system. A mild infection follows, which gives bacteria the opportunity to invade.

• BRSV. The bovine respiratory syncitial virus causes pneumonia. Acidosis seems to be a trigger, but it can affect cows and calves.

• BVD. Bovine virus diarrhea affects the respiratory, digestive, and reproductive tracts, affecting the immune system as well. It creates lesions and ulcers over different parts of the body. It's important to know that the persistently infected cow becomes so only when it is exposed as a fetus (cows get only a transient or mild infection that doesn't last, but can infect the growing fetus). BVD causes lots of reproduction problems.

• Leptospirosis. Producers can vaccinate for five strains. Bacteria infect kidneys and abortions can be caused at 6-9 months. Source may be water or rodents.

It's important to get the heifers vaccinated as early as possible, Mills noted, before they are infected.

Also, it's important to focus on the overall herd immunity by looking at colostrum management, ventilation, and not to vaccinate too young (at 3-5 weeks, a calf's immune system is only beginning to build up).

Keep a wary eye on the calf's health at a month of age, according to Mills, because "the calf is in a precarious place" in terms of its health.

Also, watch body conditioning on the cows, supplement with Vitamin E and selenium in the diet, and feed the cow "to feed the calf," Mills said.

Mills reviewed key health guidelines in maternity pens, keeping pens clean, and keeping calves away from the older animals to prevent Johne's Disease.

When calving, learn how to wait and be patient, noted the veterinarian.

Beth Grove, Lancaster dairy agent, reviewed where Lancaster herds stand in terms of overall production. Grove noted that Lancaster falls short on days to first service (a good goal should be 75, she noted, while Lancaster stands, on average, at 96).

Shortening those days can add up to major dollars for producers. Greater dry matter intake could be key to a cow ovulating earlier after calving.

Cow comfort and footing are essential. Producers could also be selecting for poor reproductive traits as they search for improved production genetics.

Herd managers should have roughly half the herd pregnant at any given time, she said, with a 13.5-month calving interval.

Grove reviewed some of the new research that debunks several accepted norms. The old reasoning that cows would stay in heat 18 hours, be observable in heat at night, and go back to being in heat every 21 days is being rethought. Cows today are different, according to one study, that showed cows stay in heat only eight hours, with only nine mounts or stands per heat period (Holstein) or 12 mounts for Jerseys.

Cows are also more likely to show heats not necessarily at night, but when first turned out or when not eating or resting.

"Cows do not fit into the mold that we used to think they did," said Grove.

Grove spoke about technology to detect heat, such as HeatWatch, using a pressure-type pad and radio signal telemetry. Cost for a 100-cow dairy to detect mounts is about $6,000, she said.

Grove noted that meetings such as "Moo University" could be continued at later dates around the county.

Competition Awards Homegrown Items

PHILADELPHIA — "Be a winner in the 2003 Pennsylvania Fair Home Grown and Homemade Competition," said Beverly Gruber, chairman of the competitive exhibits for the upcoming fair at the Philadelphia Park Race Track, May 15-26.

Potential exhibitors may enter their creative work in a wide variety of classes outlined in the 2003 Exhibitors Handbook. All homegrown and homemade products produced by the exhibitors are welcome at the fair.

Categories of entries include sheep, goat, home-baked products, canned products, needlecraft, arts, crafts and photography, hay and grain, vegetables, nut, fruits and berries, floral exhibits, and homemade wine.

The 54-page guide lists possible cash prizes and rules for entry, display, and removal of exhibits. First, second, and third place cash prizes as well as ribbons will be awarded to each class. A "best of show" ribbon will also be given in each general category.

For your official Exhibitors Guide, write to P.O. Box 5, New Tripoli, PA 18066, or call (610) 767-5026.

Cuba: Sustainable Agriculture

arrangements with the government as long as they farm, they keep control of the land. In contrast to the U.S., there are also limits imposed on the size of privately owned, agricultural operations.

Success in achieving sustainability of Cuban livestock production lags behind that achieved with vegetables and fruit. It is impressive, though, that pork and poultry production, occurring in more diversified systems on small farms, have reached levels that existed before the crisis, when most all animals were raised in conventional confinement facilities. And university research conducted in Cuba, using sustainability indicators they have developed, has concluded that a dairy operation managing 20 cows provides the maximum level of efficiency.

Throughout the tour, on every stop and around every corner, we found evidence of an innovative spirit that was reminiscent of many sustainably run operations in Pennsylvania. But in contrast to the common attitude in our own homeland, the success of such innovation is seen by Cubans as critical to the future security of their country.

As an example, and in light of the crisis faced since 1989, two different Cuban officials made the following comments: "Sustainable agriculture has become an integral part of our national defense ... a 'war' of the people," and "Our soils are a strategic natural resource." These are the words of leaders who knew keenly that mass starvation might very well be the alternative.

The Cuban farmers we met along the way beamed with pride as they told of what they had achieved against overwhelming odds. Starting with the aim to feed their own families, feed their communities and, for the most part, their society.

Few, if any advocates for sustainable agriculture in our own country would wish to swap our government or economic circumstances with those found in Cuba. But it sure doesn't hurt to see an example of how we might utilize the principles of sustainability in the U.S. to avoid our own Special Period in the future.

Winter Snow Restricts Spring Planting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After facing two years of drought conditions in Pennsylvania, farmers welcomed the myriad of snow falls this past winter. As the snow melts this spring, it will undoubtedly help replenish low water levels while providing the soil with moisture to help nourish future crops. Thawing out from all this snow, however, will also steal valuable time from the upcoming spring planting season.

"Farmers throughout Pennsylvania will have to concentrate their efforts into minimal amounts of time this spring," said PennAg Industries Association President, Robert Gueldner of Best Feed and Farm Supplies, Inc. in Oakdale, Pennsylvania. "The fields will need to be prepared faster than normal which could mean working long hours into the night and on weekends."

Not only are extended hours required this spring, but more hands will be needed as well. The good news is that if you're looking for a little supplemental income during this time of economic downswing, many farmers will be hiring temporary part-time field hands.

For those rural residents who are worried about the spring rush disrupting their daily routines, fear not. Most farmers are well aware that plans are already underway for May graduation parties and June weddings and will try to minimize any disturbances whenever possible.

"While most people were enjoying the beauty of the snow-covered landscapes this past winter, Pennsylvania farmers were already planning for the corn-on-the-cob that you'll want to compliment your hamburgers and hot dogs at this summer's picnics," Gueldner said.

N.H. Farmers Win Land Stewardship Honor

STRATHAM, N.H., — John and Lorraine Merrill of Stratham, N.H., have won American Farmland Trust's (AFT) 2003 Steward of the Land Award, the largest nationwide award for land stewardship.

The Merrills were chosen out of 117 applications from 41 states to win the $10,000 prize, which was presented to them for their lifelong commitment to environmental stewardship, public education, policy activism, and farmland protection.

"For decades, the Merrills have been devoted to protecting not just their farmland, but water, wildlife habitat and natural resources on the farm," said AFT President Ralph Grossi. "They truly are stewards of our land and a great inspiration to farmers across the nation."

Stuart Farm is situated in the Great Bay Estuary region, a coastal habitat that encompasses more than 10,000 acres of tidal waters and is considered one of the most important estuarine systems on the East Coast. The Merrills have gone to great lengths to ensure that this fragile ecosystem remains intact: they constructed a freshwater wetland to treat waste runoff, and cooperated with Partners for Fish and Wildlife to restore a salt marsh on their farm.

John and Lorraine Merrill of Stratham, N.H., have won the AFT 2003 Steward of the Land Award

"The restored salt marsh on the Stuart Farm is one of the most thoroughly researched on the East Coast and has become a model for similar efforts," said Bruce Marriott, retired agriculture program leader at University of New Hampshire Cooperative Extension, who nominated the Merrills for AFT's award.

The Merrills' operation, Stuart Farm, is a 200-cow dairy farm that is run by John and Lorraine, in partnership with their son Nathan and daughter-in-law, Judy. They were early pioneers in rotational grazing and other conservation practices, and their family was among the first in the state to permanently protect their farm with an agricultural conservation easement in 1981.

The family's environmental achievements were accomplished with the help of state and federal conservation programs that encourage stewardship on private lands.

the Dillsburg Farmer's Fair.

Masonic Homes, a continuing care retirement community situated on 1,400 acres in Elizabethtown, Lancaster County, was named Seed Stock Breeder of the Year.

Frank Stoltzfus manages the farm, which includes a notable purebred Shorthorn seed stock operation. Stoltzfus has been working with the herd since the mid 1980s. Through selective use of AI and an embryo transfer program, the herd has expanded to about 150 cows. Offspring are marketed though several sales and beef expositions.

Goals of the Masonic Homes Shorthorn enterprise include continuing to expand Shorthorn genetic availability and increase grassland use on the farm.

Ed and Mike Buckwalter of Lancaster County were recipients of this year's Cattle Feeder Award.

Cattle feeding is a long tradition in the Buckwalter family. Joe Buckwalter, Ed and Mike's father, has been buying and selling steers for more than 50 years. Brothers Ed and Mike joined the farm operation in 1977. Over the years, they have expanded and modernized the feeding operation by renovating barns and adding silos and stationary mixers.

The Buckwalters feed and sell about 1,200 finished head of cattle a year from operations in the Lititz, Marietta, and Salunga areas. Their feeding program generates average weight gains of 2.7 pounds per animal per day. Most of the cattle are sold directly to a packer, and some are contracted. The Buckwalters also direct-market halves and quarters to individuals.

Bob and Kate Boyce of Lil' Ponderosa Angus, Carlisle, received the Environmental Stewardship Award.

Over the past 17 years, the Boyces have developed a highly productive, environmentally sound, intensive grazing operation on the farm. Bob has implemented a soil improvement program to preserve and develop topsoil, and worked with the Natural Resources Conservation Service to install stream bank fencing and crossings and build buffer strips and fence to keep cattle off steep slopes and out of waterways.

The Boyces have also erected a dry manure storage and winter feed station. They use a no-till drill developed in New Zealand to establish and renovate pastures.

Kristy Dietrich, Hamburg; Kyle Hershey, Mountville; and Emilie Miller, Womelsdorf, were awarded PCA scholarships at the banquet.

The three youth, all high school seniors, have demonstrated exemplary commitment to agriculture and the beef industry, as well a scholarly excellence.

Dietrich and Miller are both students at Tulpehocken High School in Berks County. Hershey attends Lancaster Mennonite High School.

Dietrich and Hershey plan to pursue degrees in animal science at Penn State. Miller will attend Kansas State University, also to study animal science.

New Farmers, New Generation

Pennsylvania Farm Link

The Life Cycle of a Farm

Even though "old man winter" has been reluctant to release his icy grasp, spring is showing its face on the horizon with the progressively greener shades on our landscape.

Before we know it, that time of year will be upon us when we will have more to do than we can possibly accomplish. Each new day will sprout new plants or animals to tend, and new smells and textures to awaken our senses. Perhaps, in spite of ourselves, hope will spring eternal that this year will be a good one. Everyone knows we need it.

Just as each year we begin anew with the seasons, a family farm goes through a business or life cycle that is constantly changing but predictable. Each farm goes through certain definable stages with different styles of leadership and management needed at different stages as the business grows. Not every stage progresses smoothly often there are major setbacks or sudden leaps forward. No two farms or farm families are alike.

Birth of the farm business. In the beginning of a new farm venture, the entrepreneur is filled with vision and dedication for what lies ahead. Even though many new farm businesses fail, enthusiasm and initiative abound. Hard work and perseverance abound. New relationships with family and business partners are started — new ventures are taken on and too much is going on to work out many of the details. Family members are expected to help. Survival is the utmost concern.

Growth and development. As the farm business grows, new responsibilities and opportunities appear on the horizon. In the early years, it may have been good enough to make decisions "by the seat of your pants," but now decisions need to be made that will affect the farm's future ability to change and grow. The owner may no longer be able to make all the decisions and growth may necessitate delegating or sharing responsibility with others. Family members may be reluctant to "pitch in" if they can't share in the profits and decision-making. New employees may be hired and need to be schooled in the values and ways of your farm's operation. Identification of those who possess leadership abilities needs to be identified for the future of the operation.

Maturation. At this point, the business has grown and is stabilized. The next generation is old enough to participate fully in the operation and the question of long-term viability surfaces. Will the farm stay in the family? Is there a successor willing and able to take over? Is the older generation ready to turn over the responsibility and the authority to handle the operation? Coincidentally, this stage usually occurs when the farm reaches its height in productivity, making it the best time to consider transition to the next generation.

Decline or renewal. Change is constant and cannot be avoided. Any farm business that refuses to change will erode and degenerate. At this point the older generation is tired and reluctant to take on many changes — renewal through the next generation is needed. If there is no one in the family willing or able to take on management, then the farm may pass to outside ownership and/or management. If the next generation (whether heirs or unrelated parties) is not enticed to begin anew, the farm business will most likely wither and die.

As you begin a new cycle in this year's growing season, consider the stages of growth on your farm and what you can do to contribute to that ongoing process. For more information on getting started or transferring your farm to the next generation, contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 or e-mail us at pafarmlink.net.

Pa. Milk Production For February

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during February 2003 totaled 841 million pounds, 1.2 percent below last February's production of 851 million pounds, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS). The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 588,000 head, down 2,000 from January but 5,000 more than February 2002.

Production per cow averaged 1,430 pounds in February, 110 pounds less than January's production per cow of 1,540 pounds and 30 pounds less than February 2002.

Milk production in the 20 states surveyed during February 2003 totaled 11.6 billion pounds, up 1.7 percent compared to production in these same states during February 2002. January revised production, at 12.5 billion pounds, was up 1.8 percent from January 2002. The January revision represented an increase of 1 million pounds from last month's preliminary production estimate.

Production per cow in the 20 major states averaged 1,485 pounds for February, 13 pounds above February 2002.

The number of milk cows on farms in the 20 major states was 7.81 million head, 66,000 head more than February 2002 but 3,000 head more than January 2003.

Get Ultimate Weed Control in Just One Pass

There never seems to be enough time each spring to apply fertilizer and crop protection products, and plant corn or soybeans as well So anything that will reduce trips across the field can keep tasks on time and help make the difference between average and outstanding yields

That's why you should consider partnering your grass and broadleaf herbicides in one timely preemerge or preplant tank-mix application

Hornet* WDG herbicide is the perfect addition with any of today's leading soil-applied herbicides Whereas most soil-applied grass herbicides control grasses and small-seeded broadleaf weeds like waterhemp, pigweed and lambsquarters, Hornet WDG also takes out large-seeded broadleaf weeds like common and giant ragweed, velvetleaf, cocklebur, marestail and sunflower

In fact, Hornet WDG is the perfect partner with any of Dow AgroSciences' acetochlor products – Surpass*, TopNotch*, FulTime* or new Keystone* and Keystone LA herbicides Acetochlor is the top active ingredient for soil-applied control of both grass and broadleaf weeds In most Midwestern university trials it gets higher weed control ratings than products with the active ingredient metolachlor – Dual II Magnum or Bicep II Magnum – for control of many broadleaf weeds

To learn more about turning your soil-applied herbicide application into a one-pass program by adding Hornet WDG with your grass herbicide, contact your local ag retailer

More Than 200 Holsteins Compete At Spring Show in Harrisburg

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 50th Pennsylvania Holstein Association State Spring Show, conducted late last week at the Large Arena of the Farm Show Complex, drew more than 80 exhibitors.

The show included 213 animals. The largest class — the fall calf class — had 32 entrants.

Alta Mae Core, Kentucky, judged the show.

"There are not many places you can go and have this much quality in the junior show this early in the year," said Core.

She picked an animal owned by Benjamin Cashell "that puts it all together, that is most correct end-to-end," Core said.

Jamie McQuaide took home youth reserve junior champion honors with a fall yearling heifer because of the animal's "straightness of lines, strength, and correctness."

In the open heifer show, "in my mind there's not a question. I knew when I saw her," said Core. "Hands down, she puts it all together, she has the size and scale that you want for this time of year."

The way the animal "walked out and had a want-to-win look in her eye" put a spring yearling heifer owned by Jim and Nina Burdette in the junior champion spot.

The heifer was also high honorable mention at the 2002 All-American show as a spring calf.

The reserve champion, a fall calf, was also a bred-and-owned animal owned by the Burdette family. The calf's dam, a seventh-generation Excellent cow, is part of a line of cows all with the Windy Knoll View Farm prefix, said Nina Burdette.

The cows that competed for overall grand and reserve champion spots "really exceeded all my expectations at the kind of quality of cattle you would have out here this time of year," she said.

In the youth show, Cory Thompson's 4-year-old took senior and grand champion spots. Cory also won the youth best animal bred and owned.

Scott Walton's 4-year-old won reserve senior and reserve champion placing in the youth show.

The open show senior champion, Windy Knoll View Promis ET, which moved into the grand champion spot, was "right on, ready to go, at 12 o' clock," said Core.

"She looks at you and says, 'it's going to be me.' She is stylish and silky and is a complete package."

The 5-year-old cow also garnered best animal bred and owned honors for the Burdette family.

The reserve senior champion, Valleyriver Pretzel, a senior 3-year-old, was also stylish, according to Core. "I love how she blends. She's very correct and is put together perfectly."

The reserve champion is owned by D. Zuco, Dr. Laurie Joseph, and Rod and Linda Rankin. The cow resides at God's Country Dairy Farm, Acme. The cow was an All-Pennsylvania cow last year and reserve at All-American. According to Jason Rankin, who exhibited the animal, the cow is originally from Canada.

Jim and Nina Burdette, along with their two sons Kyle and Justin, operate Windy Knoll View Farm, Mercersburg, a 240-acre farm. They milk 85 Holsteins and have approximately 100 head of young stock.

"We like to show as a family, it's fun for us," said Nina. The couple met through 4-H, as Nina was involved in the beef and horse rings and Jim exhibited Ayrshires. They began the first-generation farm in 1975. Consequently, the show ring has long been a part of the family's life.

Besides shows in Pennsylvania and the East Coast, they also travel to Madison, Wis., to exhibit animals at the World Dairy Expo, said Nina.

They also won premier breeder and premier exhibitor honors at the spring show.

Show judge Alta Mae Core operates a 250-acre dairy farm with her husband and three children in Kentucky. They milk 60 Jerseys.

The family has garnered premier breeder at the All-American and World Dairy Expo honors for the Jersey breed. They also bred the 2001 All-American champion Jersey.

Core has judged not only in the U.S. but also Canada, Argentina, Brazil, Scotland, and Ireland.

U.S. Hog, Pig Inventory 2 Percent Below Year Ago

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. inventory of all hogs and pigs on March 1, 2003 was 58.1 million head. This was 2 percent below March 1, 2002 and 2 percent below December 1, 2002, according to the National Agricultural Service (NASS).

• Breeding inventory, at 5.96 million head, was down 4 percent from March 1, 2002, and down 1 percent from last quarter.

• Market hog inventory, at 52.2 million head, was 2 percent below last year and 3 percent below last quarter.

The December 2002-February 2003 U.S. pig crop, at 24.4 million head, was 2 percent less than 2002, and 2 percent more than 2001. Sows farrowing during this period totaled 2.77 million head, 2 percent below last year.

The sows farrowed during this quarter represented 46 percent of the breeding herd. The average pigs per litter was 8.81 pigs saved per litter for the December 2002-February 2003 period, compared to 8.74 last year.

Pigs saved per litter by size of operation ranged from 7.60 for operations with 1-99 hogs to 8.90 for operations with more than 5,000 hogs and pigs.

U.S. hog producers intend to have 2.84 million sows farrow during the March-May 2003 quarter, 3 percent below the actual farrowings during the same period in 2002, and 1 percent below 2001. Intended farrowings for June-August 2003, at 2.79 million sows, are 3 percent below the same period in both 2002 and 2001.

The total number of hogs under contract, owned by operations with over 5,000 head, but raised by contractees, accounted for 35 percent of the total U.S. hog inventory, up from 31 percent last year.

Revisions: All inventory and pig crop estimates for March 2002 through December 2002 were reviewed using final pig crop, official slaughter, death loss, import, and export data in U.S. level balance sheets. Based on the findings of this review, adjustments of one percent were made to the September 1, 2002 inventory, two percent to the June-August 2002 pig crop, and one percent to the Dec. 1, 2002 inventory.

Ag Bankers Committee Meets In Hershey

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — R. Scott Smith, Jr., president and chief operating officer of Fulton Financial Corporation, recently addressed the American Bankers Association's Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee when the group met in Hershey.

The Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee's members include banking representatives from 14 states. The group meets quarterly to discuss legislative, legal, and environmental issues that affect our nation's farms and agribusinesses.

Michael Firestine, senior vice president, from the ag department at Fulton Bank/Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank, is a member of the Committee and acted as host for the meeting.

The group discussed many topics, including the impact of the drought on farmers across the nation; prices of farmland; trends affecting crops, livestock, agricultural products and commodities; and the banks' agriculture lending portfolios.

Smith spoke to the group about Fulton Financial Corporation's commitment to farms and agribusinesses. The volume of lending to farms and businesses related to agriculture through two Fulton Financial affiliate banks Fulton Bank and Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank — makes Fulton Financial the 23rd largest Ag lender in the United States.

The Committee also discussed agricultural patents and trademarks, patent infringement and the ensuing risks to ag lenders. In addition, the group developed some basic tips for beginning farmers, which will soon be available on the American Banker's Association website (www.aba.com).

The Committee's next meeting will take place on July 12-14 in Park City, Utah.

Bioterrorism Conference

such as notifying the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) of imported food shipments.

Jennifer Flinchbaugh, a student at Penn State, gave the presentation, "Agroterrorism: A Distinct Possibility."

Flinchbaugh defined agroterrorism as the intentional introduction of pathogens into livestock, crops, or processed food products.

The threat, she said, comes from not only foreign but domestic groups such as animal rights activists "hoping to discredit agriculture" and bring financial ruin to the industry.

Since agriculture is the largest segment of U.S. industry, it could be targeted, she said. Flinchbaugh added that low agrosecurity on farms and little risks to terrorist themselves, in comparison to more conventional methods, make agroterrorism a possibility.

To protect agriculture, the USDA has established a Counterterorrism Policy Council. In addition the Plum Island Animal Disease Center focuses on diseases of domestic animal and plants.

An attack is "not a question of if, but when," said Flinchbaugh, "and will we be able to stop it?"

Nan Hanshaw-Roberts, emergency programs coordinator, Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Health Services, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), gave participants information on planning for an emergency.

The cost of a disease outbreak "isn't just the loss of animals," said Hanshaw-Roberts. "Even if the science isn't there to support any problems of eating animal products, fear can cause people not to purchase animal products."

The PDA has established an "Emergency Management Stakeholder Council" made up of representatives from various groups who recommend strategies for dealing with animal health emergencies, she said.

Efforts also include upgrading PDA regional equipment, such as outfitting each region with four-wheel-drive pickups, replacing cars with minivans, stockpiling protective equipment and depopulation supplies, and obtaining portable power washers for each region to clean and disinfect trucks.

The PDA is also working toward "geocoding" each livestock facility in Pennsylvania, "no matter how big or how small. We want to know where these animals are" to help to prevent disease from moving from farm to farm, said Hanshaw-Roberts. A Geographic Information Systems (GIS) pilot program is under way in Wyoming County, she reported.

PDA has also implemented a 24-hour emergency voice mail/pager for veterinarians and producers, cell phones for all regional staff, and an emergency contact list. Laboratories have also stepped up developing the capability to handle potentially hazardous specimens, she said.

Across Pennsylvania, PDA is conducting seminars for veterinarians to help them recognize the top 10 diseases that may be used by terrorists.

Bobbie McClean, director, Bureau of Food Safety and Laboratory Services, PDA, discussed, "If a Food Outbreak is Bioterrorism, How Soon Will We Know?"

"Since 9/11, tampering reports are taken very seriously," McClean said. "We consider the intentional or deliberate contamination of food bioterrorism."

However, "determining if a food outbreak is deliberate is not an easy task," he said, since causative agents for both intentional and unintentional foodborne disease are the same. Additionally, there are "a lot of unprotected products on the shelf, which are the most difficult to detect tampering," he said.

"We depend on reporting system from the health department and from doctors reports," he said. Public health officials look for a grouping of diseases greater than normally expected.

"I cannot stress enough the importance of information gathering and sharing through the computerized network" of federal, state, and local levels, to warn of a bioterrorism attack, he said.

Kumar Nalluswami, public health physician, Division of Infectious Disease Epidemiology, Pennsylvania Department of Health, spoke about the "Threat to Human Health from Food."

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has listed groups of microorganisms designed as "critical biological agents."

Since there are a large number of U.S. agencies with a role in foodborne disease events, "we are all learning the importance of sharing intelligence information," he said.

Clinics, hospitals, and laboratories are required by law to report a certain list of diseases, he said."Increasing Security of Commodity-Based Ingredients" was a presentation by Barry Traband, technical director, Horizon Milling, LLC, a Cargill Foods affiliate.

"We're thinking of things differently now," he said. "We need to protect our food from the time the seed hits the ground to the time it enters customers' mouths," he said.

The supply chain for wheat, he said, moves from the farm to the collection point to distribution and processing. Consequently managing risk, for example, includes such steps as sealing rail cars and carefully tracking shipments, according to Traband.

"In general it comes down to people looking out for each other. It's diligence, is what it really comes down to."

Traband is optimistic about the industry's advancements. "There is a lot of wheat out there to look at, but farm-to-fork protection is the goal, the standard. The industry is pulling together, we're all on the same team with this one," he said.

Tim Weigner, director of food safety programs, Food Marketing Institute, gave the presentation, "Retail aspects of the Bioterrorism Threat."

Weigner discussed retailer's efforts in assessing threat agents and reducing threats by security. Limiting access to controlled areas and using closed-circuit TV monitoring are only two measures, according to Weigner.

The conference also included a panel discussion featuring the day's speakers.

Hosts of the day were Penn State's Department of Food Science, Pennsylvania's Food Industry Group (FIG), and the Keystone section of the Institute of Food Technologies.

Keynote speaker of the conference was Ernest Del Bueno Jr., vice president, Global Crisis Management, Rowan and Blewett Incorporated.

A retired Coast Guard commander, Del Bueno, with more than 25 years of experience in crisis management, has advised on airline disasters, product recalls, food safety, physical security, and air quality. Del Bueno gave his address during Tuesday evening's dinner.

Equestrian R judge. During the open house, he will be discussing "what a judge looks for, something that will be a unique perspective," said Heller.

Jumping, barrel racing, grooming, and pole bending demonstrations will be a part of the day, in addition to introductory riding lessons.

The stables are part of Flintrock Corporation, which includes a 200,000 broiler operation in Lititz and 200,000 roaster on a farm in Church Hills, Md.

The corporation also sells poultry products — litter amendments to other broiler growers in the region — and deals in equipment rentals.

Adding the equine aspect to the existing poultry operation was "good land utilization," according to Daryl Heller. "It seemed like a logical fit.

"The horses complement agriculture well, and we have crossover with employees," he noted, who can help with both the poultry and equine operations, which are located close together in Lititz.

Celebrate Spring At The Horse Farms Open House

An exciting weekend for families comes together April 12-13 during the 11th Annual Horse Farms Open House.

Fifteen professional horse farms, most of which are normally off limits to the public, swing open their barn doors and give visitors the chance to learn about horses, their uses and care, and ways to get involved with them.

Nationally-recognized show barns, breeding stables, boarding and lesson facilities, horse rescues and even a horse park band together for just one weekend to welcome visitors.

The event sponsored by the Pennsylvania Horse Expo, is free (though there may be a charge to ride) and self-guided. Individuals travel from stable to stable in their own vehicles.

The farms will be open to visitors from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday. Each year about 10,000 people visit participating farms during the event.

The farms span counties in the southeastern quadrant of Pennsylvania, from York to Lehigh and from Montgomery to Schuylkill Counties.

This area is horse country, home to many of America's most prestigious equestrian events and to more than 85,000 horses, from Olympic medalists to family pets.

Generally, farms are located within a two- to three-hour drive of New York City and Washington, D.C. and as close as 30 minutes from Philadelphia and Baltimore.

The stables feature a range of breeds from tiny miniatures to giant draft horses, and disciplines that bridge the spectrum of the region's horse industry.

The open house includes farms specializing in Thoroughbreds, Quarter Horses, Paints, Arabians, drafts, Paso Finos, miniatures, and Mountain horses. Visitors can get a peek inside stables that focus on showing, Thoroughbred racing, boarding, driving, hunt seat and western lessons, breeding, dressage, team penning, and rescuing unwanted and abused horses.

Visitors can also explore a horse park dedicated to preserving open space for equestrian sports.

Each stable will conduct demonstrations using their horses and the things they do best. But visitors can do much more than watch.

Four stables — Red Man Ranch in York County, Valley View Farm in Bucks County, Chesterfield South in Lebanon County, and Flint Hill Farm in Lehigh County — will offer introductory riding lessons, and Double D Stables in Dauphin County will permit supervised riding.

Visitors can enjoy a hayride at the Bucks County Horse Park, Valley View Farm and Flint Hill Farm, and a surrey ride at Hillside Farm in Montgomery County.

Pony rides will be available at Flint Hill Farm, Red Man Ranch, and Valley View Farm. Young foals with their moms will frolic for visitors at Amity Acres in Schuylkill county, Our Farm in Montgomery County, Valley View Farm, and Double D Stables.

Activities for children range from greased pig catching to horseshoe painting. Other activities include live music, drill teams, petting animals, and story telling. Most stables will offer horses for sale or, in the case of horse rescues, adoption.

A number of stables will have vendors for those who want to do a little shopping and several will be selling new or used tack and supplies.

Among the demonstrations planned are cowboy polo, dressage, logging with horses, horseshoeing, swimming therapy, gaming, team penning, round pen training, drill teams, jousting, grooming and horse care, natural horsemanship, foal imprinting, barrel racing, and nearly every style of riding.

Participating farms will have exhibits, bring horses to the show and be on hand to answer questions about their farms, horses, and services.

Complete information on the farms is on the web at www.pennsylvaniaequestrian.com.

Lancaster Banquet Honors 'Conservation Ethic'

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Approximately 170 people gathered recently to "recognize those who epitomize the conservation ethic" in Lancaster County, according to Don Robinson, administrator, Lancaster County Conservation District.

The conservation district's 52nd annual banquet, conducted at Yoder's Country Restaurant, New Holland, honored both individuals and businesses with awards highlighting conservation activities in agriculture, construction, community and public service, and youth education.

During the evening, Robinson recognized Warren Archibald, retiring district conservationist with 41 years of service to conservation. Archibald, who came to the Lancaster field office in 1974, has worked as a "behind-the-scenes conservation professional for 28 years," said Robinson.

Archibald "encouraged us always to do whatever we had to do to get conservation on the land," said Robinson.

The Outstanding Cooperator of the Year was given to Earl G. and Grace Martin, Ephrata. Over the years Martin has worked to convince 11 different landowners on 17 parcels of land to install conservation practices such as waterways and/or terraces on their property.

His conservation efforts go back 30 years. He has installed thousands of feet of waterways and terraces, besides planting cover crops or working to get a stormwater basin and pipe installed.

The 2003 Soil Stewardship Award went to he John David Martin family, Churchtown.

Martin's father, Paul Martin, began working with the Soil Conservation District in 1958 by installing contour strips.

John David has added further improvements such as waterways and an "Archie basin," a small stormwater basin and pipe to take low water flows. The farm has also been preserved through the county agriculture preservation board.

Barbara Rathbone Frank, a biology teacher from Penn Manor School District, received the Environmental Educator Award.

Her curriculum includes such projects as a reading program for students to learn about the Chesapeake Bay watershed. Frank's students have also completed water quality projects on the Conestoga River and have analyzed a nearby construction site.

In addition Jereme Dippner, Jacob Ault, and Steve Witmer were recognized for their volunteer work at the Lancaster County Youth Conservation School.

The following people received the Conservation of Natural Resources Award for the Lake Placida project: Jim Baney, Landstudies project manager; Brad Clubb, president, Flyway Excavating; Dan Errett, Lake, Roeder, Hillard and Associates; Larry Bekelja, Elizabethtown College; and James Wenger, Derck and Edson Associates.

Dippner, Ault, and Witmer, former conservation school students, returned to the school to serve as counselors.

Kauffman's Fruit Farm, Bird-In-Hand, was the recipient of the Lancaster County Youth Conservation School Service Award. For several years the business has supported the conservation school's food preparation.

Several organizations were involved in an effort to restore beauty and water quality to Elizabethtown College's Lake Placida.

The college received one of two Building Industry Conservation Awards, the Conservation of Natural Resources Award.

The designing, landscaping, engineering, and construction efforts help to manage storm water, in addition to efforts such as planting flowers, controlling the waterfowl population, removing sediment, and slow erosion along the water's edge.

Involved with the project were Derck and Edson Associates, Flyway Excavating, Inc., Landstudies, and Lake Roeder, Hillard and Associates.

Jake King, Ja-Lyn Developers, received the Conservation of Natural Resources Award during the banquet. The award recognized his work for the past 10 years developing the Rockwoods project in Mount Joy Township.

Also honored for their part in the project were Abel Construction for site work, Rettew Associates for plan design, and Mount Joy Township.

The project included land which was not prime farmland, significant woodland, or land adjacent to wetlands. The award recognized the project's erosion control methods, topsoil conservation, and water system upgrading.

The Watershed Excellence Award went to the Little Conestoga Watershed Alliance (LCWA), an organization that has worked for the past three years on restoring portions of the Little Conestoga Creek watershed.

Restoration efforts included restoring a tributary stream and helping landowners establish forested riparian buffers. The group has also worked to educate local residents about watershed issues by conducting municipal officials meetings, educational workshops, and native landscaping programs.

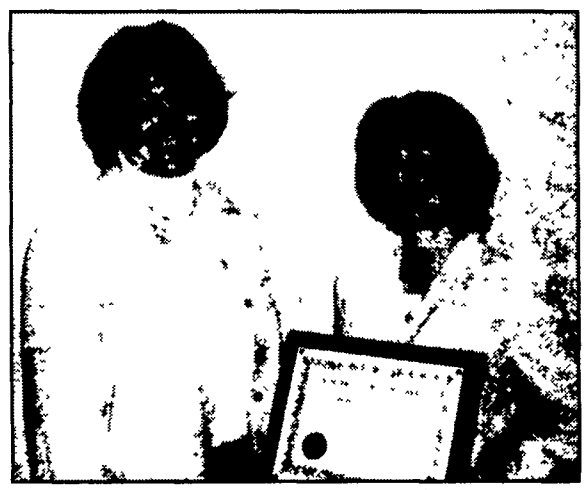
Additionally, Katie Nickles and Mark Rineer Jr. were recognized as recipients of the Lancaster County Conservation District Ann Brow Memorial Scholarship for 2002.

Nickles is attending Penn State and studying environmental resource management. Rineer is attending Virginia Polytechnic Institute and majoring in fisheries science.

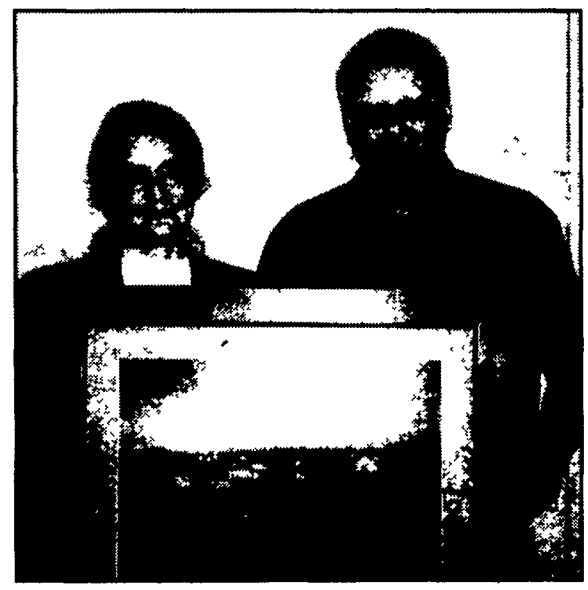
The Lancaster County Conservation District accepts applications from graduating seniors planning to pursue a major that focuses on resources or conservation.

The Youth Conservation School Counselor Award went to Jereme Dippner, with more than three years of service to the school. He is joined by his wife Julie.

Warren Archibald, retiring district conservationist, holds a picture of the James Kreider farm, where he helped to install conservation practices when he came to the Lancaster field office in 1974.



Barbara Rathbone Frank, a biology teacher from Penn Manor School District, received the Environmental Educator Award. She is joined by Sallie Gregory, education coordinator for the conservation district.



The 2003 Soil Stewardship Award went to John David Martin and his wife Mary.

The following people gathered to receive the 2003 Watershed Award: Jinnen Boyle, Pennsylvania DEP; Roy Baldwin, state representative; Michelle Spitko, president, Little Conestoga Watershed Alliance; Dan Synoracki, on the board of directors; and Matt Kofroth, watershed specialist at the conservation district.

Jake King, left, Ja-Lyn Developers, also received the Conservation of Natural Resources Award. Also receiving awards as part of the project were Tony Kreider, Abel Construction Company; Blaine Miller, Mount Joy Township; and Kim Graybill, Rettew Associates.

Stray Voltage And Dairy Farms Conference Coming To Camp Hill

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — "Stray Voltage and Dairy Farms: A Conference for Farm Advisors, Educators, Utilities, and Public Policy Advisors," will take place April 9-11, in Camp Hill.

Experts from Wisconsin, Michigan, Nebraska, New York, Arizona, Ohio, Vermont, and Canada will share their experience and answer questions at this unique event. University, state government, utility, and industry perspectives are included. The conference is sponsored by NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service.

Stray voltage is defined by the USDA as "a difference in voltage between two surfaces that may be contacted simultaneously by an animal." When this occurs, the cow acts to complete the circuit and experiences a small shock or "tingle." Research shows that stray voltage may increase cow stress and health problems. Sometimes, however, problems attributed to stray voltage are in fact caused by something else, and a multidisciplinary team is needed to identify the actual problem.

The conference will begin with an overview of electricity and wiring fundamentals to ensure that everyone has the background necessary to understand the more technical presentations that follow.Specific objectives of the conference are to:

- provide an overview of the fundamentals of electricity, power distribution, and farm and home wiring systems;
- present research accomplished since the 1991 publication of Effects of Electrical Voltage/ Current on Farm Animals: How to Detect and Remedy Problems, the most current USDA handbook on the topic;
- discuss on-farm and off-farm sources of stray voltage, the National Electric Code, measurement of stray voltage, data interpretation, and mitigation technology;
- define a multidisciplinary approach to determine whether problems attributed to stray voltage have another cause;
- summarize state and utility responses to stray voltage concerns and explore the need for improved standards; and
- publish a conference proceedings that will be useful to educators, dairy advisors, utilities, and others involved in stray voltage issues.

The "Stray Voltage and Dairy Farms" conference is being coordinated by NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering ServiceThe registration fee is $310 after March 25 or at the door. The fee includes one conference admission, an evening reception, one lunch, break refreshments, and a copy of the conference proceedings. See NRAES contact information below.

The conference will take place at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

To register for the conference or request a brochure that includes the program, a registration form, travel information, and more, contact NRAES, PO Box 4557, Ithaca, NY 14852-4557; phone (607) 255-7654; fax (607) 254-8770; or e-mail nraes cornell.edu. Two Dairy Workshops Planned In Lancaster County

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Two workshops will be conducted in Lancaster County for dairy farmers, nutritionists, and industry persons interested in improving transition cow health and nutrient management for their dairy herd.

The first workshop will take place April 8 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center and the second April 15 at the Lancaster DHIA lab, Manheim. The sessions will run from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

Speakers will include Dr. Les Lanyon from the department of Crop and Soil Sciences; Dr. Robert VanSaun from Veterinary Sciences, and Dr. Zhiguo Wu of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science. Two nutrient management continuing education credits will be offered for attending this workshop.

The following topics will be covered:

- Transition cow health: Potassium metabolism, downer cow problems, milk fever prevention; flowchart for diagnosing and correcting transition cow disorders.
- Forage management for transition cow health: Crop potassium uptake and content; tools for monitoring farm potassium status and reducing forage potassium content.
- Dairy phosphorus: Reduce ration phosphorus for better transition cow health, less manure phosphorus, and lower feed costs.

The cost for each workshop is $10, payable at the door, which will include lunch. To register, call the Lancaster County Extension office at (717) 394-6851, or send name and address to Beth Grove, Lancaster County Extension, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

2003 Red Angus EPDs Available

DENTON, Texas — The 2003 Spring Red Angus EPDs are now available.

The Red Angus Association of America (RAAA) publishes EPDs for growth, female fertility, and carcass traits which include genetic predictions for birth weight, weaning weight, yearling weight, milk, total maternal, calving ease direct, heifer pregnancy, calving ease total maternal, stayability, marbling, ribeye area, and back fat.

Red Angus carcass EPDs are available on over 340,000 head. This industry-leading program has successfully incorporated both traditional carcass data and real time ultrasound into the calculation of the genetic predictions for carcass merit.

The new EPDs are from the Spring 2003 Red Angus National Cattle Evaluation conducted at Colorado State University. The EPDs are available on the web at www.redangus.org.

Maryland & Virginia Cooperative Outlines Plan

Co-Op Works With National Milk Producers To Address Low Prices

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative reported a good year in 2002, despite low farm milk prices and increasing consolidation in the industry.

The co-ops 83rd annual members meeting and luncheon/ banquet took place at the Hagerstown Clarion Conference Center Wednesday, including award presentations to quality milk producers and longtime members.

Maryland & Virginia last May hired Jay Bryant as general manager to run the co-op after a merger proposal with Land O' Lakes and other cooperatives failed.

Jack Hardesty, retiring president, said that the co-op solidified its operations in 2002, even while milk prices hit historic lows.

"We've grown stronger and more unified," Hardesty said. He and Bryant outlined a business strategy that included several new developments.

The co-op broke ground last July for a new fluid milk processing plant, Red Oak Dairy in Baxley Ga.; purchased Maola Milk and Ice Cream plant, New Bern, N.C.; and created the Southern Marketing Agency (SMA) to address consolidation issues.

"We continue to see retail consolidation drive the industry," Bryant said.

While the SMA has helped secure market access for Maryland & Virginia members, Bryant said much more needs to be done.

"We have a lot of room for improvement," he said. "I think we can do a much better job balancing our surplus."

Balancing milk supplies has to be a "larger regional effort," Bryant said. A study is underway to determine the future balancing needs of the region.

Maryland & Virginia is committed to ownership and management of manufacturing plants, and to leadership in developing regional balancing plants, according to Bryant.

He spoke about the sluggish milk market — including a slipping Class I mover price, down to $9.64 per hundredweight in April — and ways the co-op is trying to help improve the dire situation for dairy farmers.

Marva Maid, Maryland & Virginia's fluid processing plant in Newport News, Va., showed an increase in milk sales and earnings in 2002. Bryant acknowledged that low farm milk prices were a factor in the facility's successful year.

For dairy farmers, relief from the market slump doesn't appear forthcoming.

"We've seen demand for dairy products for the last several months remain relatively flat," Bryant said. "As you look out over the horizon, you really don't see any change."

Bryant said Maryland & Virginia is lobbying Washington for legislation that would curb milk protein concentrate (MPC) and casein imports.

U.S. House and Senate Resolutions under consideration would impose higher tariffs on imports of these products. Bryant said the resolutions so far have been co-signed by 76 House and 20 Senate members.

Maryland and Virginia is also working closely with the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) on an inititiative called Cooperatives Working Together (CWT).

The goal of CWT is to join together cooperatives on a national level that represent 70 percent of the domestic milk supply in order to "bring supply in line with demand," Bryant said. He noted that a 2.6 percent national increase in milk production in 2002, along with imports, has helped created milk supplies that are in excess of demand.

CWT would depend on voluntary co-op funding, and will consider extracting about 15 cents per hundredweight from farmers to help subsidize the plan.

"All of this is in the development stage," Bryant said.

The group plans to develop a strategy this month and begin implementing it in May.

Members at the meeting passed a resolution, introduced by board member Richard Mosemann, to support continuing payments to dairy farmers under USDA's milk income loss contract (MILC) program implemented under last year's Farm Bill.

According to Mosemann, the MILC program has benefited Maryland & Virginia producers, and has not increased milk supplies as some larger producers have contended.

Jimmie and Matthew Eustace, center, were honored for 75 years of membership in Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative. They are joined by General Manager Jay Bryant, left, and Jack Hardesty, president.

MILC program benefits are capped at the production level of herds of about 130 cows.

The co-op named the family of Joe and Nona Schwartzbeck, Union Bridge, Md., Quality Producers of the Year for herds of more than 150 cows in the Federal Order 1 area.

The Schwartzbeck's Peace & Plenty 325-cow herd tallied in 2002 an average somatic cell count of 137,519, standard plate count of 692, and a 0.547 freeze point.

Involved fulltime on the dairy are son Gus, along with his wife Lisa and children. Another son Shane and his wife Lisa and children also work parttime on the farm.

"This is a family business," Joe said. "Everybody participates, and that really makes a difference. You've got to play close attention to mastitis, and knowing cows really well helps ID new cases."

For herds of less than 150 cows, Samuel Swarey and family of Mechanicsville, Md. were named top, with somatic cell counts of 95,222, plate counts of 442, and a freeze point of 0.548.

For herds in Federal Order 5 & 7 areas, Quality Producers of the Year were H. Dean Ross of Waynesville, N.C., more than 150 cows, and Allen and Marlene Witmer, Mountain View Dairy, Deer Lodge, Tenn., less than 150 cows.

J.W. Eustace and family of Catlett, Va. were honored for 75 years of membership in the co-op.

J.W. Eustace started the farm in 1928. The 300-head operation is now run by his son Jimmie Eustace and his grandson, Matthew.

Entries Sought For 2004 Beef Industry Vision Award

DENVER, Col. — Nominations are now being sought for the 2004 Beef Industry Vision Award. The award is presented by the National Cattlemen's Foundation (NCF) and sponsored by Ford Motor Company.

The Beef Industry Vision award is given to an individual who has demonstrated innovation in their cattle operation or beef business and serves as an example to others to follow. These individuals can be from any segment of the industry.

Up to seven regional winners will be selected from the pool of nominations with the national winner being announced at the 2004 Annual Convention and Trade Show in Phoenix, Ariz., next January.

"The Vision Award gives the industry an opportunity to take a closer look at individuals who have made a difference for their own business and the beef industry through innovative practices," according to Bob Josserand, NCF Chairman.

Nominees will be evaluated on the basis of effective use of technology, impact on profitability, ingenuity of implementation, impact on the industry, and optimum resource management.

"There are some amazing people in cattle and beef businesses in the United States and we would like to recognize a few of their efforts," Josserand adds.

All nominations are due May 1. For nomination forms and program information contact the National Cattlemen's Foundation at (303) 694-0305 or ncf@beef.org.

Local Group To Study Biodiesel Possibilities

Meetings Set For Berks, Adams Counties

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A biodiesel initiative is in its early planning stages, with an eye toward possibly building a biodiesel plant in southcentral Pennsylvania.

"Right now, we're looking to see if it's feasible," said Mike Gerhart, an ag economy consultant with the Harrisburg-based Regional Economic Development District Initiative (REDDI).

According to Gerhart, a biodiesel production plant in the area could increase value-added opportunities for farmers.

Soybean oil would be the main source for producing biodiesel in the area. Waste kitchen oil can also be converted into the fuel and used as a petroleum-based diesel replacement.

At this point, REDDI is moving toward the stage of making requests for proposals from independent consulting companies to conduct a feasibility study for such a plant.

Two informational meetings have been scheduled on the topic.

"We want to inform farmers about the information we are putting into a feasibility study," Gerhart said.

If a feasibility study would show positive potential for such a project, the next step would be to form "a nucleus of farmers" to invest and launch it, Gerhart said.

Meetings are scheduled for April 16 at the Berks County Ag Center, Leesport, and April 21 at the USDA Service Center in Gettysburg.

Both meetings will begin at 7 p.m.

Call Gerhart at (717) 920-8454 for more information.

Pa. Dairy Farmers Head To Washington

MIFFLINTOWN (Juniata Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy farmers will join others from across the nation in Washington, D.C., April 7-9, in a call to limit imports of casein and milk protein concentrate (MPC).

A deletation, led by Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Larry Breesh, will advocate closing trade loopholes that allow a flood of MPC and casein into the U.S.

The farmers specifically support the Milk Import Tariff Equity Act — S.560 by Sens. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Mark Dayton, D-Min., and H.R. 1160 by Reps. Don Sherwood, R-Pa., and David Obey, D-Wis. — which would limit these imports by imposing effective tariffs.

"American dairy producers need fair markets," Breech said. "Dairy farmers are getting the lowest prices for their products that they've seen in 25 years. Imported casein and milk protein concentrates fuel the dairy crisis by flooding the domestic market."

A 2001 General Accounting Office study indicated that MPC imports had surged by 600 percent in six years, more than doubling in 1998 and 1999. While certain imported powdered milk products are subject to tariff-rate quotas, MPC and casein are not.

Breech said the farmers also are asking the Food and Drug Administration to uphold standards that restrict the use of MPC in standardized cheese.

While in Washington, the farmers will meet with members of the Pennsylvania congressional delegation and attend briefings with officials from the FDA, USDA, and International Trade Commission.

PMMB Raises Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) recently voted to add 15 cents to the state's $1.40 per hundredweight over-order milk premium for the months of April, May, and June.

The PMMB named increased costs of production from increased fuels costs as a chief reason for raising the over-order premium paid to farmers for Class I milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania.

Parties testifying to the board in favor of the 15 cent increase differed in their recommendations regarding whether and to what extent the premium should be allowed to "float" monthly with changes in fuel costs (rather than be set at a fixed rate).

The PMMB noted that it is hesitant "to implement a floating premium that could conceivably float to a point where competitive problems could arise anew."

The PMMB's concern about a disparity between the Pennsylvania over-order premium and out-of-state voluntary premiums causing a competitive disadvantage for Pennsylvania milk had resulted last fall in a vote to lower the premium in steps from last year's $1.65 level to $1.25 by April-June of this year.

In February, however, in response to an emergency hearing, the PMMB voted to maintain the premium at $1.40 through June.

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening Will help rumen function over freshening Less feet problems and less stress

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

PFB Announces Rural Road Safety Week

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB), the state's largest general farm organization, reminds rural drivers that Rural Road Safety Week begins Monday and runs through April 13.

Various county Farm Bureaus will hold media events throughout the state to create awareness that farmers are on the roads with their large equipment at this time of the year.

"With spring planting season now under way, it is the ideal time to make drivers aware of the special precautions they should take when driving on rural roads," said PFB President Guy F. Donaldson.

Pennsylvania's House of Representatives passed a resolution designating the week of April 7, 2003 Rural Road Safety Week.

"Machinery, such as tractors, travels at speeds less than 25 miles per hour and are often wider than other vehicles. In addition, machinery operators often cannot hear approaching traffic due to engine noise, therefore they are forced to rely totally on their vision and the skills of other drivers," said Donaldson.

Motor vehicle safety including the use of tractors and other machinery begins with courtesy. Machinery operators should drive on the shoulder of paved highways and other drivers should be patient and pass with care.

Here are some other tips to keep in mind when driving in rural areas:

• Anticipate that between April and November you will probably encounter farm equipment at some point along your route.

• Watch for the slow moving vehicle emblem. When you see this emblem, slow down.

• Pass with caution.

• Don't assume the farmer knows you are there.

• Before you attempt to pass, blow your car's horn to signal to the farmer that you are there.

"The primary issue we want to call attention to with this campaign is to be courteous to all drivers on the road. A safe driver looks out for other drivers and potential hazards," said Donaldson.

NFU Asks For Hearings On GM

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In a recent letter to the House and Senate Agriculture committees today the National Farmers Union board of directors urged that additional steps be taken to safeguard crop production from contamination of biopharm and other genetically modified (GM) commodities.

"While we support the benefits that could arise from biopharm and GM crops, we also advocate caution in its growth as an industry," NFU President Dave Frederickson said.

The farm leaders requested hearings on the overall impacts biopharm and other GM commodities have on production agriculture.

Penn State Conducts Public Conflict Workshop

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — On Tuesday, a Penn State-sponsored workshop outlined strategies that community leaders can use to make constructive use of public conflict here at the Farm and Home Center. The workshop, attended by 15 planning commission members, school board officials, township board members, and agri-industry representatives was conducted by Tim Collins, extension agent, community and economic development, right, along with Winifred McGee, Lebanon County extension director. Organizations Will Advocate Reforms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A half dozen state organizations, representing virtually every segment of Pennsylvania's economy, will join with Pennsylvania Farm Bureau during its 2003 State Legislative Conference to advocate reforms that will make health insurance more available and affordable in the commonwealth.

Leaders of the groups will participate at a news conference in Harrisburg scheduled for 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, April 8 in the Main Rotunda of the Capitol.

Several hundred farmers also will be visiting the Capitol throughout the day to discuss other priority farm and rural issues.

New York Spring Carousel To Take Place April 11-14

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The New York Holstein Association's New York Spring Dairy Carousel will take place April 11-14 in Syracuse.

Last year's shows hosted 359 Holsteins, 97 Ayrshires, 45 Brown Swiss, 149 Jerseys, 34 Milking Shorthorns, and 83 Red and White Holsteins. Many of the winners went on to be near or at the top of their classes at the fall national shows. This year the Guernsey breed will add its Spring Show to the events making this truly an all-breeds Carousel.

The New York State Holstein Association and its Breed and Promotion Committee has offered to set up farm tours for those attending the Carousel. The state office will arrange a tour for an individual and/or group to the site of choice.

For a schedule of events or to request a tour, call (607) 273-7591.

Lebanon Holstein Night Aug. 8

NEWMANSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Donald Krall will host this year's Lebanon County Holstein Field Night on Friday, Aug. 8.

Krall is owner of Locust Ridge Holsteins, a herd of 65 registered Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 24,747 pounds of milk, 914 of fat, and 764 of protein. The breed age average (BAA) is 106 percent.

Krall is the breeder of Locust Emory Caleb. Her full sister, Cosmo, VG-87, is in the barn at Locust Ridge.

The field night will include a buffet style meal, sponsored by local agribusinesses, from 6:30-8:30 p.m.

Guests will have the opportunity to judge three classes of Holsteins between 6:30 and 8 p.m.

Directions to the Krall farm:

From Lebanon, take Rt. 897 south to Flintville Rd., turn right and go to the first farm on the left.

New Holland, Pa.
Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, April 4, 2003

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2630	1432
LAST WEEK	2695	1595
LAST YEAR	2485	1371

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold steady to .50 higher on the early week runs; with the late week supply trading fully 1.00-2.00 higher. Even though many area producers are running low on feed, most of the cattle in Lancaster County are still showing some pretty good finish as the high Choice and Prime supply has increased over the past couple of weeks. The only decrease noticeable is the weights as most of the fats are weighing from 1100-1300 lbs, instead of the normal supply of heavier 1300-1495 pounders. Slaughter Holstein steers sold with a firmer undertone for the week on mixed runs Slaughter heifers also sold firmer, although the supply was not large. Slaughter cows sold steady to 2.00 lower to kick off the week, with increased boneless beef values adding some support late in the week as prices trended steady to 1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls sold near steady early in the week, with a heavy supply late in the week that included over 100 head trading with a firmer undertone. This week's reported supply in Lancaster County included 40 percent steers (1046 head), 5 percent heifers (121 head), 39 percent cows (1037 head), 6 percent bulls (155 head), with the balance of the three sales made up of 271 head of feeder cattle.

Slaughter Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1110-1465 lbs 78.50-82.85, 76.75-81.50 early in the week, Yield Grade 5 75.50-77.75. Choice 2-3 1025-1470 lbs 76.00-79.75, 75.00-78.50 early in the week, couple packages 80.00-80.35 ate, Yield Grade 4 or full 71 50-76.50, heavy 1505-1595 lbs 70.50-75.25 with a couple 76 00-77.00, high dressing Charolais and Limi-X's 79 50-83.75, few Yield Grade 1-2 81.50-81.75. Select and low Choice 2-3 1110-1495 lbs 73.00-76.75, 72.25- 75.50 early in the week. Select 1-2 1010-1460 lbs 70.00-74.25.

Holstein Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-3 1280-1595 lbs 64.00-70.25, few 70.25-71.00, few beef-crosses 73.25. Choice 2-3 1210-1575 lbs 60.00-65.25, few full 58.00. Select and low Choice 2-3 1175-1575 lbs 57.25-61.75. Select 1-2 1155-1495 lbs 53.00-59.25. Few Standard 1-2 1190-1270 lbs 51.75-54.50.

Slaughter Heifers. Prime 3 1140-1250 lbs 75.75-77.50. Choice 2-3 1055- 1450 lbs 74.25-76.75, few Yield Grade 4 72.75-74.00, few Charolais and Limi-X's 76.00-77.25, few lightweight 950-990 lbs 68.75-72.00 Few Select and low Choice 2-3 1055-1255 lbs 70.75-72.00.

Slaughter Cows: Breakers 70-75 Over 1400 lbs 39.00-45.75, 36.00-40.00. Boners 75-80 Over 1200 lbs 36 25-40.50, 35.00-37.25. Lean (Hi-Yield) 80-85 Over 1200 lbs 36.00-40.75, 34.00-37.25. Lean 85-90 Over 1000 lbs 32.00-36.50, 29.00-32.50. Lean (Light-Wt) 85-90 750-1000 lbs 28.50-32.00, 25.00-29.50.

Slaughter Bulls: Yield Grade 1 1010-2225 lbs 48.25-56.00, few fancier up to 58.50. Yield Grade 2 1010-2130 lbs 46.75-48.50.

Calf Summary: Compared to last week, slaughter calves sold at the same prices quoted over the last several weeks. The only increase was late in the week where a few more buyers were interested in killing a few and therefore put a little push in the market. Holstein bull calves going into special-fed veal barns sold sharply lower early in the week, with late week prices trading sharply higher. The bull calf market seems to be in a rut in Lancaster County, as bulls trade sharply lower early in the week due to the very good late week demand that pushes packages of graded Number One 90-100 lb bulls up to or above the 200.00 range. Holstein heifers were not well tested this week, with the only decent test on Tuesday trading sharply higher as buyer attendance increases, therefore heifers moved above the 300.00 barrier. This week the PA Department of Agriculture graded 931 head of bulls and heifers for the two graded sales in Lancaster County.

Slaughter Calves: Utility 60-110 lbs 11.00-44.00, mostly 12.00-30.00, with a couple up to 50.00.

PFB Questions Withdrawal Of Pooling Proposal

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) has questioned why the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) withdrew proposed pooling regulations after a public hearing was completed, and has asked the board for an explanation of its sudden action.

The board's decision to withdraw the regulations came minutes after a recent joint public hearing conducted by the Senate and House Agriculture Committees in State College. The proposed rule would pool 45 percent of the over-order premium among all Pennsylvania dairy farmers on all milk usages, including cheese, butter, and ice cream. The remaining 55 percent would be dispersed by individual dealer pools, as is the current practice.

The over-order premium, set by the PMMB, is the amount paid above the federal order price to dairy farmers for Class I (fluid) milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania.

Before the board's decision to withdraw the pooling proposal, the regulation was scheduled to be considered by Pennsylvania's Independent Regulatory Review Commission at a March 27 public meeting.

"It is very disheartening that the board chose not to support their own recommendation after taking so many years to make a decision, and after investing two years in the regulatory process," said Joel Rotz, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's dairy specialist. "PMMB's chairman did a commendable job presenting the overall issue, so the hurried decision by the board is both a surprise and a puzzle.

"After all the time and effort that has been invested in this matter by PMMB, dairy farmers and their representatives, it deserves decision instead of more delay." Rotz said. "Farm Bureau has asked the board for an explanation of its action."

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Carlisle Clark, Hustontown, and "CRCF Lil Firecracker" took home grand champion female honors at the Pennsylvania Farm Show' Red Angus Show. The heifer first topped the February calf division.

A two-year veteran of the Farm Show, he has exhibited cattle for five years.

Carlisle is the son of Jack and Tina Clark, Clark Farms. The Clarks purchased the calf's mother already bred.

The family is not new to the Farm Show winner's circle. Carlisle's brother Jack took home grand champion steer honors in 2001.

The family's operation includes 300 head of cattle — 150 registered Angus and Red Angus — and the remainder feedlot cattle.

ADADC Mid East Selects Officers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East board of trustees recently elected its 2003 officers.

Paul Broering, of St. Henry, Ohio, Mercer County was re-elected to a fifth term as president.

"I am proud to be a part of an organization that is continually seeking new opportunities and implementing cutting edge programs, such as the 3-A-Day of Dairy program, to build markets for dairy products," Broering said.

Since 1984 when the program began, per capita consumption of total dairy has increased. Total milk consumption has increased by 13 percent since 1984.

"The dairy promotion checkoff program continually works to increase the overall demand for dairy products on behalf of American's dairy farmers," Broering said.

Also re-elected to office were Rita Kennedy, Valencia, Butler County, vice president; Betty Herron, Salem, Ohio, Columbiana County, secretary; and Ray Diebold, Altoona, Blair County, treasurer. All officers were elected to serve one-year terms.

Base Program
KING'S GRAZING MIX

- Very Palatable
- Good Drought Tolerance
- Late Heading

Contains: BG-34 diploid PRg blend including Mara, Tivoli tetraploid PRg, Baridana and Baraula orchardgrasses, Cyclone red clover, Alice white clover, and Puna chicory. One of our most popular mixes. Usually ready to graze in 60 days.

Grazing increases cow longevity and lowers costs. At the PA Grazing Conferences in March, Dr. Tom Roche, a dairy nutritionist with Dexcel, a New Zealand applied research group, challenged PA dairymen to set a goal of $1,000 profit per cow at $12 milk. Managed grazing is essential to achieving this goal. King's AgriSeeds offers several locally developed grazing mixes. Call us or your local dealer for our complete lineup.

Italian Ryegrass Management

Last fall due to the drought, many acres were planted into Italian and annual ryegrasses. Most fields overwintered well, but some look banged up from our harsh winter. In particular, fields that went into winter with greater than 10 inches, and those planted late (mid-Oct. or later). Most of these fields will grow out of this winter injury. We recommend that you give injured fields a little time before you plow them up. The quality of forage produced from these ryegrasses is worth being patient.

Management Tips:
- Fertility: 50 units of nitrogen during green up (now) and after each cutting or every other grazing.
- Cutting: Cut when 20 inches high. Multiple cuttings are encouraged to get the most high quality feed, especially if you are running low in stored forages.
- Crop Rotation: Kill off by moldboard plowing or 1.5X rate of glyphosate (Roundup). Follow with BMR sorghum sudangrass if short on stored forage. Can follow with corn silage, forage sorghum, or soybeans.

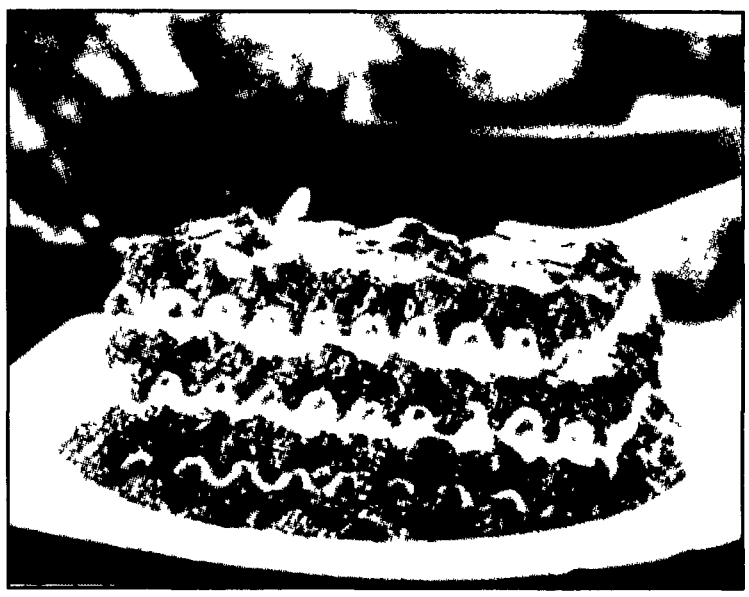
Your Favorite Italian Meals

"Beefing up" in a gym might require hard work and patience, but beefing up Italian dinners is easy. With jarred pasta sauce products, virtually no muscle is required to prepare meals that will satisfy even the heartiest meat lovers.

According to a 2001 attitude and usage study, 45 percent of home cooks take the time to add ingredients to store-bought pasta sauce, with meat being the ingredient added most often.

Try these recipes with your favorite sauces:



This lasagna recipe can also be halved for future Italian meals.

MEATY NO BOILING LASAGNA

2 containers (15 ounces each) ricotta cheese
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese (about 8 ounces), divided
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese, divided
2 eggs
2 jars (2 pounds each) meat sauces
12 uncooked lasagna noodles

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In bowl, combine ricotta, one cup mozzarella cheese, ¼ cup Parmesan cheese and eggs.

In 13×9-inch baking dish, spread one cup meat sauce. Layer four uncooked noodles, then one cup meat sauce and ½ ricotta mixture; repeat.

Top with remaining four uncooked noodles and two cups meat sauce. Cover tightly with aluminum foil and bake one hour.

Remove foil and sprinkle with remaining cheeses. Bake uncovered an additional 10 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Serve with remaining meat sauce, heated.

NOTE: Recipe can be halved. Bake in an 11×7-inch baking dish one hour. Continue as above, omitting last 10 minutes of baking. Makes 12 servings.

HEARTY STUFFED PEPPERS

4 large green bell peppers, cored and seeded
1 2-pound jar meat sauce
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (about 4 ounces), divided
1 cup uncooked instant rice
1 cup water

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In 9-inch baking dish, arrange peppers; set aside.

In large bowl, combine meat sauce, ½ cup cheese and uncooked rice. Evenly stuff peppers with sauce mixture. Pour water in dish, then cover with aluminum foil. Bake 50 minutes or until peppers are tender. Remove foil and top with remaining ½ cup cheese. Bake five minutes or until cheese is melted. Makes four servings.

PIZZA TATER CASSEROLE

1 pound ground turkey or beef
½ medium red bell pepper, chopped
½ medium onion, finely chopped
½ cup shredded carrots
11⅛-ounce can condensed Italian tomato soup (undiluted) or other tomato soup
4½-ounce container sliced mushrooms, drained
1 cup shredded part-skim Mozzarella cheese
32-ounce package frozen tater tots

Heat over to 400 degrees. Coat a 9×13-inch baking dish with cooking spray.

In a large nonstick skillet, cook ground turkey or beef, bell pepper, onion, and carrots for 8 minutes or until vegetables are softened and turkey or beef is no longer pink; drain. Add soup and mushrooms and mix well.

Transfer to a baking dish. Top with cheese, then tater tots. Bake, uncovered, 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown.

CHEESY MANICOTTI

8-ounce package manicotti shells
32-ounce jar spaghetti sauce
2 cups Mozzarella cheese
16-ounce Ricotta cheese
12 crushed saltines
2 eggs, beaten
¼ cup chives
½ teaspoon marjoram
½ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
½ cup Parmesan cheese

Mix beaten eggs and Ricotta cheese. Add saltines, chives, marjoram, basil, and garlic salt. Add Mozzarella cheese.

Stuff cooked and drained shells, ½ of shells at a time. Stuff 14 shells.

Cover bottom of large baking dish with some spaghetti sauce. Pour remaining sauce over shells. Sprinkle with ½ cup Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes, covered. Uncover and bake 10 minutes more.

PEPPERONI CASSEROLE

½ box rotini noodles, cooked according to package directions chopped onion to your taste
1 pound hamburger
1 pound sausage or you can use 2 pound hamburger
32-ounce jar spaghetti sauce
1 package pepperoni, sliced

Brown meat in a skillet with the onions. Mix all ingredients together in a casserole dish. Top with Mozzarella cheese and pepperoni. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes or until cheese is melted on top.

ITALIAN SHELLS

1 package jumbo shells
1 pound ground beef
1 pound hot Italian sausage
1 carton low-fat cottage cheese
16-ounce Mozzarella cheese, shredded garlic powder, oregano, basil, salt, and pepper to taste
14-ounce spaghetti sauce

Cook shells according to package; drain and set aside.

In a nonstick skillet, brown meats and drain off excess fat. Add cottage cheese, Mozzarella cheese, and seasoning to taste.

Fill shells with mixture and place in pan. Cover with spaghetti sauce and sprinkle with Mozzarella or Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes.

In only 10 minutes of preparation time and 15 minutes of cooking time, you can have six servings of Meat Lover's Calzones on your table.

MEAT LOVER'S CALZONES

10-ounce package refrigerated pizza crust
½ cup ricotta cheese
1 cup tomato and meat sauce

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. On a greased baking sheet, unroll the dough and press into a 12X12-inch square shape. Cut in half lengthwise. Spread ¼ cup ricotta cheese over each half, leaving a ¾-inch edge. Top each half with ½ cup meat sauce. Fold dough over and seal by pressing edges with tines of a fork. Bake 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Satisfy your cravings for meat sauce with this three-ingredient recipe for Meat Lover's Calzones.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

This is not really normal.

But some abnormal things are really appreciated.

What spurred that mental debate was plunking armloads of purchases down on the kitchen counter. Contained in the two, nondescript plastic bags was an assortment of treasure. Inexpensive treasure, but treasure for sure. Because none of the contents of the bags normally or naturally occurs hereabouts in this season of fickle, April-foolish weather.

Crinkly-crisp, deep-green spinach. Cherry-red radishes. A loose head of lettuce, a deep crimson blush accenting the end of each green, fluffy leaf. Bananas, hard-fleshed and lime-colored, to be held in a cool spot to ripen. While waiting, we could snack on already ripened ones purchased just days earlier from the same location.

One Yellow Delicious apple tumbled out of one bag, its freckled, greenish-golden skin attesting to growth in the natural summer sunshine and rains (though they were sparse) of our locale. This favorite fresh market, a mere two minutes from our front door, often offers customers an apple for the road. On this day, the apple got the whole way home before I got a bite from it. Before becoming a snack soon after, it found temporary lodging with four plump, plum tomatoes, firm, red and ready to flavor cheeseburgers planned for evening sandwiches.

In early April, none of this fresh, tasty food is normal for here, or for now. Granted, we take its availability as an everyday occurrence. But it is not normal. How many fresh things do you suppose we would be chopping and shredding for fresh salads and snacks about now if we had to plant, raise, harvest and store it ourselves?

We might have spinach somewhere about, if we had paid attention and seeded some last fall. How spinach would have weathered this winter and how far along in growth it would be is uncertain. No way could it be any nicer than the fresh, picked, packaged bag of it washed, air dried, and refrigerated tucked between paper towels in a plastic container.

True, there could be some flavorless, shriveled carrots or parsnips or turnips lingering in ground cellar storage. If they hadn't spoiled. Perhaps some sprouting, poor-textured, also-shriveling potatoes. A few apples going mushy. That would be normal for now if the only fresh fruits and veggies were those we could raise and store ourselves.

But, especially with punches of cold still swatting us with snow and flurries, there's just nothing fresh outside yet to pick. Even the dandelion isn't quite ready.

A tiny row of radish seeds has sprouted at a sheltered corner of the greenhouse, but they've barely pushed leaves, much less edible flesh. And the loose-head-lettuce seed sprinkled next to the radish row has a long way to go before it becomes mature enough for salads. That is, if we can keep a plump backyard bunny making its rounds from nibbling it as fast as it grows.

Tomatoes, which seem like precious jewels about this time of year, are still a figment of our summer garden imagination. And, bananas are never normal in our region of the world, though our kitchen fruit basket is rarely without them. Their abundance and inexpensiveness is almost mind-boggling in relation to how far they travel to our local fresh produce shelves.

My bagfuls were a mere sampling of the incredible array of non-seasonal fresh produce available — year round — from retailers. Sweet grapes and juicy pears, crisp green beans, red and yellow peppers, baby carrots, citrus of many varieties and exotic treats fill out sparse offerings that would be normal for now. Vastly improved methods of storage keep even locally-grown goodies, like apples, fresh and crisp months longer than in the past.

Still, there are some delectable treats that simply are not the same out of their normal season.

ITALIAN CHEESE-IT CASSEROLE

First Layer
1 pound lean ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 clove garlic, minced

Second Layer
4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
3 pound zucchini or summer squash, chopped
4-ounce chopped green chiles
1 medium onion, finely chopped
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Third Layer
2 eggs
2 cups cottage cheese
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. For the first layer: put ground beef, salt, pepper, and garlic in a skillet over moderate heat. Stir mixture with a wooden spoon, breaking up into large chunks of meat as it cooks. Cook until well done. Drain fat, and spoon mixture into a two quart casserole dish.

2. For the second layer: put water and one teaspoon salt in a three quart saucepan. Bring to a boil over high heat, and add squash. Cook for 5-8 minutes or until very tender. Pour into a colander, drain well.

3. Transfer squash back to the saucepan and mash with potato masher or electric mixer until squash is well broken up. Add green chiles, onion, and butter. Mash until thoroughly combined. Spread over beef mixture. Sprinkle with cheddar cheese. Preheat over to 350 degrees.

4. For the third layer: put eggs into a medium sized bowl; beat with a wire whisk or portable mixer until light. Fold in cottage cheese and parsley. Spoon over squash layer in the casserole.

5. Sprinkle casserole with Parmesan cheese (you might even add a little more cheddar if desired), and place on the center rack of the oven. Bake for 35-40 minutes or until casserole is thoroughly heated and top layer is set. Serve immediately.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE

1 whole chicken
3 tablespoons olive oil salt and pepper
1 large onion
16-ounce can stewed tomatoes, cut up into small pieces
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon minced garlic
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon basil
1 teaspoon parsley
1 tablespoon sugar
2 cups sliced mushrooms grated Romano cheese
spaghetti noodles

Cut chicken into 10 pieces and remove all skin. Rinse and let drain. In a large skillet put olive oil, heat and gently place in the chicken piece. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Brown evenly on all sides.

Remove from pan and add onion. Cook until it is transparent and then add the stewed tomatoes, tomato sauce, garlic, bay leaf, oregano, basil, parsley, and sugar.

Mix well and then layer the thicken on top. Cover and simmer for about an hour to an hour and a half.

Add sliced mushrooms. Cover and simmer for an hour. Remove from heat and place on a warm platter. Sprinkle with grated Romano cheese Serve with spaghetti noodles and warm Italian bread for dunking.

SAUSAGE AND PEPPERS

1 jar of Italian sauce (any flavor)
16-ounce can diced tomatoes
2 pounds Italian sausage (still frozen)
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon minced garlic
1 teaspoon parsley
1 teaspoon sugar
3 peppers (combination of red, yellow, and green)
1 large sweet onion
spaghetti noodles

Add jar of spaghetti sauce to a large pot along with the diced tomatoes. Into this place Italian sausage, bay leaf, minced garlic, parsley, and sugar. Cover pot and simmer for about 1½ hours.

While this is simmering, cut up peppers into one-inch slices.

also slice on large sweet onion. Add to sausage and sauce and simmer for about an hour. Do not let the peppers and onions to get too soft.

Place mixture in a large bowl and serve with rice or spaghetti noodles. This is also a great picnic pleaser served on hero bread.

I prefer to use frozen sausage as when they cook in the sauce, they become very moist and do not dry out. If there is too much fat in the sauce, skim it off.

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania ' was completed in 1965 after a 30 year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible a map that shows every stream and lake He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map

The map sold extremely well - until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to the landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

The experts had always told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day "

Then, by combining Professor Higbee s knowledge with computer technology -- the STREAM MAP OF OHIO was created

Ida Risser

On this dismal gray and rainy day in March, I sit down to write this article. The washing machine is churning away and there are leftovers in the refrigerator for lunch. By the time that you read this in April, I'm hoping my husband will be home from his eight-week stay in the hospital. They seem to find one problem after another to try and solve.

On a sunny day last week I took a walk around our house. So now we have some snowdrops on the kitchen table. And my pussy willow tree is full of soft catkins.

The daffodils have more leaves than flowers as I think the dry weather last summer affected them. The small evergreens near the mailbox have survived the winter.

The florist sent a basket of blooming bulbs. There are blue hyacinths, red tulips, and yellow daffodils. Some of the poinsettias from Christmas are still blooming nicely. Not all of my African violets are going to survive, but I did have a nice pink one to give to my sister, who is ill.

One of our sons and his 14-year-old son came to visit me the other week. We went to a local restaurant for lunch. They are both very tall and quite heavy, too. I could see why as I watched them eat. They had a melted cheese and bacon sandwich. Then they had big plates of food from the salad bar. But, when they were finished, the lettuce was still on the plate.

I guess we all are what we eat, and if it is too many desserts, it will certainly show.

Editor's note: Several readers have expressed interest in sending get-well cards to Ida's husband, Allen. Lancaster Farming would be glad to forward your cards and letters to Ida's attention. Send them to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522 and we will be glad to forward them. Thank you.

Siblings Hone Niches To Remain On Family Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

NEWBURG (Cumberland Co.) — While many of their peers are leaving family farms because they cannot earn enough income from it, Melanie Dietrich Cochran and Ian Dietrich are 20-something siblings who have systematically carved out a niche that is both financially and emotionally rewarding.

Through diligent research and plain hard work, they have created value-added businesses that enable them to continue farming and make a viable profit.

Melanie makes cheese from the milk produced by her parents' Jersey herd. With the whey that is drained during the cheesemaking process, her brother Ian feeds pigs on pasture and markets the frozen pork by cut. Any bull calves born to the dairy herd are also raised on pasture and milk, and sold as pastured veal.

They work hard, but the siblings are amazed that the part they expected to be the most difficult is actually the easiest.

"Everyone said marketing is the hardest part. But we have done very little. Instead we have markets calling us."

Working on the family farm was always a part of the siblings' dreams.

Melanie said that she literally grew up in the barn. The year she was born her parents, Bill and Susan Dietrich, purchased their present 100-acre farm in Newburg, Cumberland County in 1978. They moved their 20-head Jersey herd from Bucks County. Over the years they added several other breeds but eventually settled on the Jersey breed, which they prefer for their sweet temperament, and increased the herd size to 65 milking cows.

In 1985, her parents build a large attached milk house to enable them to make yogurt to sell.

But her parents eventually had four children and operating a full-time dairy in addition to a yogurt business was too time consuming. They sold the yogurt brand name, recipe, and equipment to concentrate on the dairy end of farming.

In 1989, the family heard about conventional grazing. The farm's soil is "very droughty" Melanie said, making it difficult to raise corn silage. Of course, when Melanie was growing up, she was too young to understand the differences in soils types, but her parents' experiences eking out a living from the soil later played a role in the eventual direction of the farm.

Melanie grew up always wanting to be around cows. Ian preferred the tractor work.

Melanie earned a degree in dairy science at Virginia Tech.

"I was well prepared to manage a 1,000 cow dairy in California, but I didn't want that," she said.

Instead, in 1997 Melanie and her husband Mark Cochran moved back to the family farm. Mark, from non-farming background, is a graphic designer who works in Harrisburg. He enjoys country life but did not desire to make a career in farming. Melanie's goal was to milk cows. "I love them," she said.

When the couple first returned to the family farm, Melanie managed a fast food franchise and milked cows in the evening. But she knew the dairy end could not support two families. She searched for a way to make her dream to continue the dairy end come true.

The idea for a cheesemaking venture was sparked at a Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) conference she attended in 1997. The conference focused on value-added produce addressed toward the fruit and vegetable growers.

"We didn't grow produce. We had a dairy farm, so I started thinking how to add value to milk," Melanie said of the idea for cheese making.

Melanie Dietrich Cochran stands in front of the recent 10 acres she and her husband attained. At one time, this parcel had been part of the family farm before the Dietrich family purchased it. It was their dream to add it to the present farm.

She spoke to others involved in cheesemaking and in May 2000 took a four-day course at Cal Poly Tech Campus. Because her husband couldn't take off from his job over that time, her brother Ian, a college freshman, chose to accompany her.

The course sparked the entrepreneur gene within them. Ian quit college to assist Melanie in setting up a cheese dairy. The siblings are both ingenious and managed to do a lot of improvising to save money from buying needed equipment. For example, Ian converted an ice bank bulk tank to pump hot water inside a core. The milk from cows was immediately stored in the bulk tank, where it was then cooked and stirred until cheese curds form. It is then packed into cheese boxes and stored in walk-in coolers for curing. The siblings cleaned and painted the large area that had once served as the yogurt kitchen and refurnished a walk-in freezer.

But the siblings plan was not only to begin a cheese making business. In order to make the farm more sustainable, Ian chose to raise pigs to feed the whey from the cheesemaking process. Pork is marketed frozen by the cut under the label "Luscious Meadows." In addition, bull calves are raised on pasture and milk and sold as pastured veal.

Melanie said, "My job is to value add milk. Ian's is to value add milk waste by feeding the whey to pigs and to bull calves sold for pastured veal."

The time is ripe for the siblings' venture. They find customers want to purchase dairy products from farms that are considered more humane and environmentally friendly through grazing practices. In addition there have been no herbicides, pesticides, or chemical fertilizers used on the farm for 15 years.

"We do not use BST on our cows, and we do not dock their tails, practices that are used on many large commercial dairy farms," Melanie said.

She appeals to the personal side of customers by taking photos of the cows and displaying the photos at their market stands and by publishing a seasonal newsletter. The "Keswick Creamery" newsletters stress the family's commitment to making healthful, great tasting cheese from milk produced in a humane and sustainable way. Recipes and tidbits about the farm entice customers to keep "eating cheese."

Melanie also introduces new cheeses and tells customers about the process.

Because the bull calves are raised outside, the veal meat is pink rather than white. They have several restaurants who purchase the veal because customers are very concerned that the animals are raised in a humane way.

Their parents continue to operate the dairy end, but Melanie helps with the daily milking.

"I love the cows. I make cheese so I can keep the farm sustainable and work with the cows," she said. "I don't raise cows to make cheese."

Both Melanie and Ian stress that their parents laid the groundwork for the farm that enables them to appeal to the socially conscious consumer concerned about animal care. The farm has not used pesticides, herbicides or chemical fertilizers for 15 years.

The siblings market their products with the message that "our cows are raised in a humane and healthy way. They are not confined to a barn, instead they graze freely outside.

"Customers love our cheese that is named for our cows."

Before the cheese processing operation was set up, Melanie experimented in the family kitchen by making different types of cheese.

"It was a scary time because only feta cheese seemed to be turning out well in the kitchen," she said.

Nevertheless when the cheesemaking area was completed she mixed up the first batch — using 1,000 pounds of milk.

"It worked," Melanie said.

Cheesemaking, she explained, is a science. But weather affects the process and can required different amounts of time for the curds to form.

"Milk comes out of the cow at the right temperature for cheese making," Melanie said. After she adds the starter culture, the curd forms. When the cultured milk starts pulling away from the sides of the milk tank, Melanie places her hand on the top. If her imprint remains on the top, it isn't finished. It needs to pop back into position. Then it is cut into small pieces with a specialty-designed cheese knife.

"If you are too abusive at this stage, the protein and nutrients go out with the whey," Melanie said of the need to pay careful attention to the process.

Half the whey is drained off (fed to the pigs). Then cold water is added to make a higher moisture content and milder cheese. After the cold water is stirred in the remaining whey is drained. Salt is added, and the curds are packed into molds and set up the pressing table. Most varieties are pressed for two days.

She devised a cheese called Wallaby named after one of Ian's favorite cows. This variety has proven to be one of the most popular from the nine different cheeses that they make.

Most people starting a value-added business find marketing the most difficult and time concerning. But not Keswick Creamery — which means Old Cheese farm in Old English.

She said, "Marketing was easy. Farmers markets are looking for dairy-related stands. They opened their arms to us although a long waiting list existed for many other types of businesses wanting to enter the market."

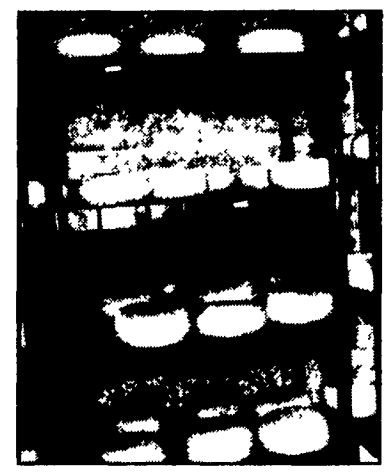
Neither did Keswick have difficulty receiving licensing from the PDA.

"We found them helpful," Melanie said. "We had inspectors come before we had everything set up, and they made suggestions that were very helpful to us."

Melanie makes nine cheese varieties, each made from raw milk and naturally aged a minimum of 60 days: cheddar handcrafted the traditional English way, which gives it a creamy temperature and excellent flavor.

- Carrock is cheddar that has been aged nine months to give it a nice, sharp, crumbly texture.

The curds are the right consistency for the next step in the cheesemaking process.



Cheese wheels are stored in coolers to ripen from nine months to two years until the desired flavor is achieved.

- Monterey Jack is a mild semi-firm cheese with small holes.
- Feta is a brined cheese originally from Greece and the Mediterranean that has been aged 60 days and has a firm texture for slicing and grating.
- Italian Herbed Feta is like regular feta but with her own blend of Italian herbs before putting it in molds. Basil, oregano, parsley, and thyme make a flavorful feta for lasagna and pizza.
- Tomato and basil feta is regular feta mixed with dried tomatoes and basil great for crumbling on pasta and using in other cooked dishes or serve with crackers.
- Feta de province is a blend of French herbs with winter savory, thyme, rosemary, basil, tarragon, and lavender flowers excellent in cooking or with crackers.
- Dragon's Breath is a blend of jalapeno, habanero, and birdseye peppers.

They began by marketing the cheese at a Shippensburg farmers' market. Through invitation they now market at several others. The most successful is the Freshfarm Market in Washington, D.C.

"We all love attending market — my dad especially, and even my husband likes helping out," Melanie said. Her husband also uses his computer skills to provide graphics for the brochures and labels printed for Keswick Creamery.

In addition to Melanie and Ian, their other two siblings are also developing jobs to enable them to continue on the family farm.

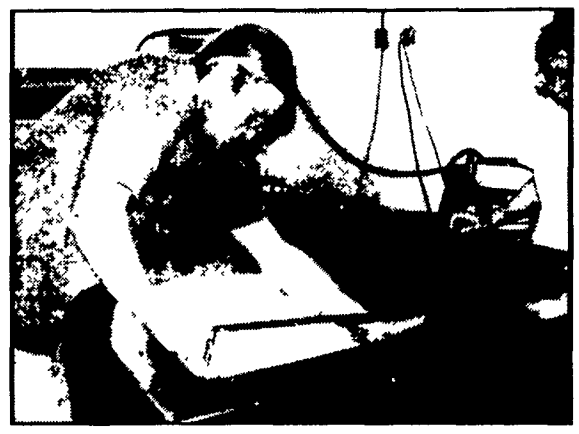
Another sister followed her dream of working with horses, and trains horses and teaches riding lessons on the "back 40 acres"of the family farm. The youngest sibling is 20 and in the process of finding his niche on the family farm. He is raising shitake mushrooms in logs in the back woods of the farm.

"We all like being self-employed," Melanie said of herself and three siblings. "We always think positive."

Most amazing is the fact that possibly five families could make a living off a 100-acre farm.

"Dairy farming alone couldn't support more than one family, and with milk prices in the toilet now, I doubt even my parents

(Turn to Page B13)



Ian Dietrich cuts curds in the cheesemaking process. He feeds the drained whey to pigs kept on pasture. The pork is marketed frozen by the cut under the label Luscious Meadows. Bull calves are also raised on pasture and milk, and sold as pastured veal.

Melanie checks pH levels to assure exact levels for the cheesemaking process. She makes nine different varieties and is working on additional flavors.

Your Child And The Internet

Sometimes it seems like the whole world is "connected" to the Internet! In reality, a large portion of households do have Internet connections or at the least, we all have access through libraries, schools and other public places.

At our house we have three children who feel we are the only family that does not have Internet at home. Of course, with two of them being teenagers, they feel they are the most deprived children around! With most of their friends spending daily time in chat groups and surfing the web, I'm not so sure that's where we want our children to be spending their time.

In reality, we are in the process of getting connected and view the Internet as an opportunity for the children and us, their parents, to gain access to a wealth of world wide information.

When it comes to homework assignments and research, the Internet can provide a wealth of readily accessible information. While search engines provide easy access to educational information as well as commercial information, parents need to be aware of potential hazards that can accompany Web usage.

While using search engines or Web links, children may intentionally or accidentally find sites that contain sexually explicit or objectionable material such as hatred, violence, drugs or cult activity. Because the material on Web sites in not monitored, information that a child finds may be unreliable, untrue or outdated.

Many games that are available on the Internet are excessively violent and many sites request personal information, including credit card information or social security numbers.

Fortunately, there are many things that parents can do to help protect their child when using the Web. Here are a few suggestions:

Keep your computer in a central location in your home (such as a family room) so parents can monitor more carefully.

Post a few rules in a visible spot by the computer. Good rules to include are never to give out personal information and never to order products over the Internet without parental permission.

Allow a set period of time each day for computer use.

Surf the Web with your children and create a favorites list of sites that you have already reviewed. If you use Internet Explorer or Netscape Navigator to access the Internet, you can view your browser's search history to view previously visited Web sites.

If children begin clearing their search histories, it may be a sign that they are visiting inappropriate sites.

Use filtering or blocking software to block certain sites from being viewed on a computer. Visit a computer store to determine the best product to meet your family's needs.

Encourage your children to tell you if they have accidentally visited an inappropriate site. By keeping communication open, children know they can approach you about any topic.

Help your child understand the benefits as well as the cautions necessary when using the Internet. Learning to use Cyberspace can be like learning to use a traffic light.

Some times it is fine to keep moving, other times you must proceed with caution and at times it is just best to STOP and exit the site. With parental help and guidance, your child can use the Internet in a positive way to access a wealth of world wide information.

Longwood Gardens To Host Daffodil Flower Show

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — The Delaware Valley Daffodil Society holds its annual flower show at Longwood Gardens near Kennett Square, April 15-16. Each year, local growers and exhibitors from as far away as Virginia and Connecticut bring hundreds of blooms to Longwood for this competitive show.

Visitors can see a wide variety of colors, sizes, and shapes and get new ideas for their own gardens. Society members are on hand to share their knowledge about buying and growing daffodils. Show hours are 1:30 p.m.-5 p.m. on Tuesday and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Wednesday.

This familiar garden favorite has come a long way from its original roots in Southern Europe and the Mediterranean region. Many surprises await those to whom the word daffodil still brings to mind the simple image of a yellow trumpeted flower. Touches of pink, red, white, or orange intermix with shades of yellow in various forms to define today's daffodils.

While offering variety, most cultivars still have the pest resistance and ease of growing which have long made daffodils a favorite with gardeners.

The Gardens are open every day 9 a.m.-6 p.m. The Terrace Restaurant, Gardens Shop, and picnic grove are also open daily. Admission is $14 for adults ($10 on Tuesdays), $6 ages 16-20, $2 ages 6-15, and free under age 6.

For information, call (610) 388-1000, or write to: Longwood Gardens, PO Box 501, Kennett Square, PA 19348-0501. For recorded information from phones in the mid-Atlantic region (Connecticut to Virginia), call (800) 737-5500. Complete information is available online at www.longwoodgardens.org.

QUESTION — Charles Mason, West Decatur, would like to have a recipe for blueberry cake that the berries do not sink to the bottom of the pan.

QUESTION — Pam Bange, Hanover, wants a recipe for cherry vanilla pie (like those sold at Nell's Surefine Market in Hanover and East Berlin. The cherry pie has almond slivers on top and vanilla flavoring.

QUESTION — Help! Recipes to make Easter candy are needed. Instructions should be complete. Paraffin wax is not FDA approved so recipes including paraffin cannot be printed.

QUESTION — Jean Mitchell, Lewisburg, is looking for a recipe to make blueberry whoopie pies.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for McKinley Pie and any history on the pie.

QUESTION — Nancy Wallace, New Holland, is looking for a place in Lancaster County where she can purchase fresh coconut that is already grated. She needs it to make Easter eggs and fresh coconut cake for Easter. Years ago, she writes, it could be purchased at farmers markets.

QUESTION — Richard Deckner, Quakertown, wants a recipe for a dropped Welsh cookie.

QUESTION — R. Diehl, Bloomsburg, wants a recipe for hamburg pin wheel with gravy.

QUESTION Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, wants to know if sesame seeds can be sprouted. She is familiar with alfalfa seed sprouting.

QUESTION — Ralph Kieffer, Halifax, wants a recipe for Aunt Flossie's tomato soup, which he heard is printed in a Lancaster County cookbook.

ANSWER — Peggy Wilson wanted descriptions for "shorts," a fireless cooker, and a Gem pan. These were referenced in a 1911 Inglenook Cookbook in recipes calling for graham flour. A reader writes that Chambers dictionary defines "shorts" as the bran and coarse part of meal, in mixture. Another reader cites Carla Emory's "Encyclopedia of Country Living" for this definition of graham flour: " 'Graham' is an old-time word for home-ground flour or flour that is a trifle on the coarse side."

ANSWER — J. Howdyshell wanted to know how to preserve honey. Cheryl Hess, Paradise, writes that honey should be stored in a cool, dry place. Liquid honey will keep for up to a year; comb and chunk honey for six months. If you refrigerate honey, it will crystallize, but can be re-liquefied by heating it in a microwave or on a stovetop in a pan of shallow water.

ANSWER — Peggy Thoman, Hanover, requested recipes for fruit syrups for pancakes. A reader sent the following:

Fruit Syrup For Pancakes/Waffles

1 cup fruit
1 cup water (or juice)
½ cup sugar
1 to 2 tablespoons cornstarch

Mix water, sugar, and cornstarch. Using a double boiler, heat and add half of the fruit, stirring constantly until mixture begins to thicken. Add remaining fruit and remove from heat. For blueberry syrup, add one teaspoon lemon juice. For cherry, add two drops natural almond flavor.

Orange Syrup

2 cups orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
½ to ¾ cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Using a double boiler, heat orange juice, peel, sugar, and cornstarch, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Remove from heat and add butter.

Vera Jane Newswanger, Morgantown, sent in the following recipes:

Cranberry WaffleSyrup

1 cup sugar
1 cup packed brown sugar
1 cup cranberry juice
½ cup light corn syrup

Combine sugar and juice in saucepan; bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Boil four minute. Add corn syrup, boil, and stir one minute longer. Serve over pancakes, waffles, and French toast.

Strawberry Breakfast Sauce

1 cup sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
½ cup orange juice
6 cups sliced fresh strawberries
8 to 10 cups red food coloring, optional

In a saucepan, combine the sugar and cornstarch. Stir in orange juice; bring to a boil over medium heat. Add strawberries; return to a boil. Cook and stir for two minutes. Add food coloring if desired. Serve warm over waffles or pancakes.

Blueberry Breakfast Sauce

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅓ cup water
2 cups fresh or frozen blueberries

In a two-quart saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch; gradually stir in water. Add blueberries; bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil for one minute, stirring occasionally. Serve warm or cold over French toast, pancakes, or waffles.

Apple Spice Syrup

¼ cup packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1¾ cups apple juice or cider

In a saucepan, combine brown sugar, cornstarch, allspice and nutmeg; mix well. Add juice or cider. Cook and stir over medium heat until the syrup is bubbly and slightly thickened.

Blueberry/Rhubarb Breakfast Sauce

6 cups finely-chopped rhubarb
4 cups sugar
21-ounce can blueberry pie filling
3-ounce package raspberry-flavored gelatin

In a saucepan, bring rhubarb and sugar to a boil. Boil for 10 minutes. Remove from heat; add pie filing and mix well.

Bring to a boil. Remove from the heat and stir in gelatin. Store the sauce in jars or freezer containers. Refrigerate or freeze until ready to use. Serve with pancakes, waffles, toast, or English muffins. Makes seven cups.

ANSWER — Mary Houser, Spring Mills, requested recipes using buttermilk and instructions for interchanging buttermilk with sour milk. Thanks to Arvilla Keeny, New Freedom, who wrote that "buttermilk and sour milk can be interchanged successfully without any changes. When using a recipe that calls for either one, you can use the same amount of the other. I have done it many times." Arvilla also sent the following recipes:

Extra Good Chocolate Cake

2¼ cups flour
2 cups sugar
½ cup cocoa powder
¾ cup shortening
1 cup sour or buttermilk
2 eggs
1 cup boiling water
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt

Sift together flour, sugar, and cocoa powder. Dissolve the baking soda in the boiling water and add that mixture, along with the rest of the ingredients.

Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or longer. Arvilla uses all-purpose flour. Take out two tablespoons flour and add two tablespoons cornstarch and sift four times. This makes the flour more like cake flour.

Buttermilk Biscuits

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup buttermilk

Mix dry ingredients and add shortening.

Mix into crumbs and add buttermilk. Knead half a minute. Roll or press into half-inch thickness. Cut to desired sizes and bake at 450 degrees 12 to 15 minutes. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet.

Antique tractors and horse and mule teams can be seen at the Southern Cove Power Reunion Association's Spring Plow Days and Antique Tractor Show, April 5 and 6, at the New Enterprise show grounds in Bedford County. In addition to the plowing demonstrations, events and displays include shingle mill, sawmill, rock crushing, chain saw carving, cider pressing, antique tractor pulls, steam engines, tractor games, kiddie tractor pulls, food vendors and a flea market.

Search Begins For Susquehanna Dairy Princess, Ambassadors, And Maids

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Susquehanna County Dairy Princess Rebecca Place will give up her reign on May 23 when a new Dairy Princess will be crowned. Rebecca is the daughter of Chuck and Mary Place of South Auburn.

Princess Rebecca has served her county well with the support of Dairy Ambassadors Amanda Miner, Abbey Puzo, Amy Roe, Alyssa Sprout, and Ashley Franklin, and Dairy Maids Abbey Hewitt, Alicia Roe, Jenna Sprout, Jessica Roe, Karin Mowry, and Lydia Carlin.

Susquehanna County is seeking candidates to serve as 2003 Dairy Princess. Single young ladies between 16-24 years old, from a dairy background or with an interest in the dairy industry should consider serving a year to help further the interests of the dairy industry.

The County Princess will represent her county at the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Pageant in Harrisburg in September. Girls at least 10 years old may take part in the Susquehanna County Dairy Maid/Dairy Ambassador program. This program is a complimentary program, which functions within the county to assist the Dairy Princess in

Horse Clinic Upcoming

MILLERSBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Whispering Dreams Farm will be conducting an open house and free horse clinics on April 12 with a rain date of April 19. The open house and clinics will begin at 9 a.m. There will be a one hour break for lunch. The clinics will resume at 1 p.m. and finish by 4 p.m.

The clinics will include trailer loading, approaching new obstacles, and teaching your horse to walk at the half halt. The clinics will run simultaneously and are free. Horse owners are encouraged to bring their horses but must call to register.

hispering Dreams Farm is located at 267 Hobby Horse Lane, Millersburg. For further information, to ask any questions, or to register, call (717) 692-4451 or (717) 692-5415 and ask for Kathy.

Extension Offers 'Cooking For Crowds' Workshops

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Penn State University has desgined a 3-hour workshop to train volunteers from churches, firehalls, and granges in principles of food safety and sanitation. Previous participants have gained new information, bought thermometers, and trained other volunteers. One stated "Everyone working with food should attend this."

Three workshops are planned this spring: April 15 from 1 p.m.-4 p.m. at the Northampton County Extension office, and May 20 at the Lehigh County Extension Office from 1 p.m.-4 p.m. or 6 p.m.-9 p.m.

To attend a "Cooking for Crowds" workshop call the Northampton County Extension office at (610) 746-1970 for a registration brochure. An on-site training for your group can also be scheduled. Cost is $6 per participant to cover cost of materials.

Apply For Dairy Of Distinction Award By April 15

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry. Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lanes; and well-maintained fences. They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals,the barnyard, feed areas and manure management.

Winning farms will be notified in late June Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at HYPERLINKmail to: MOConnor@psu.edu.

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 700 dairy farms. The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit the farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1 The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP)

2 The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4" x 4" x 12' or iron pipe 2" x 12' be used Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability

3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage

4 Signs shall not be moved to other premises New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign

5 Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee

6 No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses

7 The judges' decision will be final

8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31

9 Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30 If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign

10 Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee

Dairy of Distinction
2003 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support of the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

4-H'ers Review Farm Safety At Annual Lebanon Event

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — 4-H Farm Safety members and leaders gathered here at the Lebanon Expo Center last week to learn about a lot of things.

One, tractors and all-terrain vehicles, or ATVs, can overturn easily on slopes or steeply graded hills.

Another, even horse and buggies have to have the safety orange triangular shield on the back, otherwise known as the slow-moving vehicle, or SMV emblem.

Mark Kennedy, Middletown, demonstrates proper lighting and SMV marking during the countywide farm safety night.

Josh Burkholder uses a model tractor to demonstrate a potentially fatal rollover accident.

Still another, if you don't have a lifeline attached to you and you're working in a grain bin, within 20 seconds you could get buried and soon suffocate.

Having the proper equipment, using it properly, and knowing common-sense safety procedures were the highlights of the annual Countywide Farm Safety Night last week at the Lebanon County Exposition Center.

Del Voight, extension agent, was the chair of the event. Funding for the program, which included a free fire extinguisher to every family, came from a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Farm Safety Grant, according to Voight.

The grant total, $2,500, helped pay for powder, or ABC, Amerex fire extinguishers from Messick's.

Also, several 4-H members were given awards during a tractor certification course conducted the previous Saturday at the fairgrounds.

Pete Hanson, Palmyra, 4-H leader, noted that the certificate for driving a tractor is not a driver's license. To get the certificate, 4-H'ers also had to do a demonstration at the farm safety night.

Demonstrators included Mark Kennedy, Middletown, with proper lighting and SMV marking; Josh Burkholder, rollover demonstration with model tractor; Jared Balsbaugh and Brad Wenger, grain bin safety using a portable drill with a bit as an auger and a model bin setup; Tom Bomberger, proper hitching; Steven Martin, proper starting of tractor and the importance of staying away from bypass starting; and John Donmoyer, 3-point hitch hookups.

Steven Martin won a special recognition for scoring in the tractor-driving contest for his age division.

Derek Cibik and Samuel Thomas highlighted the importance of rollover protection systems, or ROPS. Ryan Weidman and Brandon Wenger demonstrated how to get a tractor out of the creek. Nathan Brandt provided an SMV sign demonstration. Brandt noted an SMV cannot be used for any other reason, must be displayed on any towed SMV tractor, and that farmers should replace the SMV sign if it is faded.

Brandt was awarded the tractor driving recognition from the previous Saturday's contest at the fairgrounds.

Hanson, who handed out the extinguishers, noted that the ABC-type extinguisher is good for any type of fire, including trash, wood, liquid fuels, or electrical. "For $22 apiece, it's cheap insurance," he said.

The extinguishers have a one-use life, with a shelf life of about seven years, but can be recharged. He explained the 30 seconds of firefighting power they provide can be instrumental in saving thousands of dollars.

However, the dry powder can rekindle, so water needs to be applied. He suggested an investment in a refillable, pressurized water extinguisher as well.

"When using the extinguisher, pay attention," said Hanson. "Use your head."

2003 PFGC SPRING NEWSLETTER

John Roche is one of two Irish brothers who will share views on untapped grazing potential at the PFGC Grazing Conference March 5 and 6.

Pennsylvania Forage And Grassland Conference Set For March 5

Irish Brothers, Genetic Researcher On Slate

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — This year's Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Conference will take place March 5 and 6 at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

This conference has something for forage producers and graziers at all levels of experience. The conference is sponsored jointly by the PFGC, the Pennsylvania Grazing Research and Education Center, Pennsylvania's Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative and Penn State Extension.

The first day of the conference kicks off with brothers John and Tom Roche. John works as a grazing researcher/consultant in New Zealand and Tom manages the home dairy farm in Ireland. These brothers have recently been exploring the possibilities of starting a grazing dairy here in the U.S. Over the course of the conference they will discuss "hands on" experiences as well as differences, similarities, and opportunities of grass farming in the U.S. and around the world.

Other talks on the first day will include topics such as animal genetics for grazing (sure to stimulate discussion), effectiveness of equipment to speed hay drying, keeping and using accurate farm records, large rectangular bale storage and marketing, and health concerns of animals on pasture.

Dr. Steve Washburn from North Carolina State University will be leading the discussion on animal genetics for grazing. The evening of the first day will include discussion sessions between attendees and speakers.

The second day of the conference starts with a look at grazing and family life impact of the Farm Bill and new regulations on forage and grazing farms and pasture maintenance. Presentations include recognizing the challenges of grassfed beef, farmer health concerns, and farm liability. The day continues with a presentation by the Roche brothers on grazing opportunities in the Northeast. The conference will conclude with a brief wrap up session and awarding of door prizes.

Producers will give many of the presentations during the two day conference.

The PFGC will conduct its annual reception and awards program Wednesday evening followed by informal discussions with the day's presenters.

The conference will also include a trade show with com

Nevin Mast discusses his crossbreeding program during a pasture walk on his Berks County dairy farm last September. Dr. Steve Washburn, one of the presenters set to speak at the upcoming PFGC conference, joined the group of graziers on Mast's farm.

OLEY (Berks Co.) — Nevin Mast has been crossbreeding Holsteins and Jerseys for about 10 years.

"I just like the cross so well" the dairyman said during a pasture walk on his organically certified farm last September.

Mast hosted about a dozen farmers who were interested in seeing his grazing operation. Joining the group was Mena Hautau, Berks County extension agent and Dr. Steve Washburn a dairy researcher from North Carolina State University.

Grass and hay are the main source of feed for the 50 cows on Mast's 110-acre farm. He supplements milking cows with 12-14 pounds of grain per day. Heifers between the age of four months and their first calving receive no grain.

Advantages of the Holstein/Jersey cross include easier breeding and calving, hybrid vigor, and greater survivability, according to Mast and Washburn.

'The biggest gains are in the survivability traits," said Washburn who studies the benefits of crossbreeding in dairy herds. He predicted that crossbreeds will have an increasing impact on commercial dairy production in the future.

Washburn is one of the speakers slated for the upcoming Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Conference scheduled for March 5 and 6 in Grantville.

A typical average first conception rate for purebred Holsteins when using artificial insemination is between 30 and 40 percent. In crossbreeds, that number can reach nearly 50 percent, according to Washburn.

Washburn said dairy farmers need to have a plan when it comes to crossbreeding. The plan should include researching the fertility of the daughters of bulls used in the cross breeding program, and knowing the bulls production data. While hardiness and reproductive traits are important, production must be a primary goal.

As Washburn put it, 'Milk still pays the bills.'

In crossbred cows production levels tend toward the higher-producing breed, he noted.

While Jersey and Holstein genetics make up the main part of the gene pool on Mast's farm, he also enjoys experimenting with different types of crossbreeding. For example, Mast said he recently purchased a White Park bull to breed to some of his heifers.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Project Grass is on the move.

Last year, the grassroots, grassland management group expanded to include every region of Pennsylvania, and has been at work developing new programs to foster grass-based farming and conservation practices in the state.

Last November marked the first-ever Project Grass Conference. More than 100 people attended the two-day event at State College.

The conference included presentations on the history of Project Grass — first formed in Southwest Pennsylvania in 1980 research findings on the economic and environmental benefits of livestock grazing

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to LGOOD.EPH@LNPNEWS.COM

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it. However, if your question requires someone to mail items to you, you must include your address or phone number for publishing.

QUESTION — Julia Delpino, 962 Martin Road, Needmore PA 17238, is looking for information on diatomaceous earth (DE). Does DE work well enough to be used as the sole wormer in sheep, beef, cattle and dogs? How often should it be used? Does DE irritate animals' digestive tracts? Is any age to young to treat with DE? Can DE be fed free-choice or mixed with loose minerals? If so, at what rate? How can one ensure that all the animals are eating it? If DE kills worms and eggs, will pastures eventually become worm-free?

QUESTION — R.W. Hain is searching for a book title "Slim" by William Haines. The book is about the electrification of the Pennsy Railroad in the early 1930s. You can call Hain at (717) 776-7929.

QUESTION — Bill Rapp, 6 Rosedale Terrace, Holmdel, NJ, is looking for a place to buy a strong, wooden replacement handle for an old coal shovel. The handle is about 43 inches long and 1½ inches in diameter.

QUESTION — A reader wants to know how to get a skunk out from under an enclosed porch. Also interested in learning how to be rid of skunks in general.

QUESTION — Mrs. Melvin Stoltzfus, 128-A Geist Rd. Lancaster, PA 17601, is interested in buying a new or used butter churn.

QUESTION — A reader from Kirkwood is looking for a whitewash formula to whitewash an old board fence.

QUESTION — Mrs. Henry King is looking for an old book titled "Ishmael" about a young boy who grew up in poverty and was raised by an aunt. You may contact Mrs. King at 1061 Osceola Rd., Drumore PA 17518.

QUESTION — Anna Byler requests a poem or song about a young girl who, after being told by her mother to dress warmly, goes out wearing only a thin shawl and freezes. Send the words to Anna Byler, 92 Sunnyhill Lane, Belleville PA 17004.

QUESTION — Rachel Fisher, 44 Furnace Rd., Quarryville PA 17566, asks where she can find plates for her Keen Kutter hand grinder, number 22.

QUESTION — Henry King wonders if anyone knows the rest of the words to the song that goes: "If I could see the world through the eyes of a child, what a wonderful world it would be." Contact him at 1061 Osceola Rd., Drumore PA 17518.

QUESTION — D. Peters, Bethlehem, asks where he can find curly maple veneer. He needs two 3x10-inch pieces. Call (610) 866-3399.

QUESTION — A reader wants instructions to make baskets out of Christmas cards. Since the directions are too complicated to print in this column without diagrams, someone will need to mail the instructions directly to Girvin Ann Wainwright, 512 Wainwright Rd., Punxsutawney, PA 15767.

QUESTION — Richard Laughman, Chambersburg, wants to know where a Sony Superscope reel to reel tape player can be fixed.

QUESTION — Bill Dennies, Hamburg, N.Y., wants the address of Karin Bucan who does heirloom gardening. He and his wife are newcomers to heirloom gardening and would like to talk with Karin.

QUESTION — A reader wants the words to a song she heard years ago. She remembers these words: "The cyclone appeared, it darkened the air, the lightening flashed dark ore the foam. The children all cried, don't send us away. But let us stay here with you...."

Also, she wants the words to another song: A small boy asked the storekeeper about calling his mamma in heaven. "My child the merchant murmured as he stroked his anxious brow. Go call Him up and ask Him where your mother lives right now...."

QUESTION — Ernest Martin, 5427 Division Highway, East Earl, PA 17519 wants any calendars, wall plaques, and other advertising items printed with Harry M. Good, East Earl. The dry goods store was started on his grandfather's farm in the late 1950s and later the name was changed to Good's Store. Call (717) 355-2074.

QUESTION — Gideon L. Stoltzfus, Gordonville, wants a Champion juicer with a burned out motor. He wants to mount one on an air motor. He also wants a Vitamix blender that is in good shape except for the motor.

QUESTION — Pat Hartman, Ligonier, wants to know where to find balsam. She remembers seeing the answer in this paper but lost the address. She wants the answer repeated for what balsam is and where to get it.

QUESTION — A reader wants a good used copy of the book "What Katy Did Next" by Susan M. Coolidge. Call (814) 275-1689.

QUESTION — C. Chelsney, Martinsburg, wants to buy parts for a hydramac 12 c skid. Call (814) 793-3160.

QUESTION — A. Mary Nolt, New Holland, wants to know the value of a Zenith egg grader scale and what antique dealers are interested in items such as these.

QUESTION — E. Rissler, Mohnton, had a Canon Starwriter 300 with inkjet printing (1995 model) word processor that he liked but it broke and cannot be fixed. Does anyone have a used one to sell to him. He would be willing to consider another brand if it has an inkjet printing system. Call (717) 484-0515.

QUESTION — David Diseroad, Lineboro, Md., wants to buy a used home milk pasteurizer and cream separator in working condition. Call (410) 239-6211.

ANSWER — To the Quarryville reader who wanted to know where to get slot cars that are used on electronic race tracks, a reader writes that they can be found at Jay's Race Place, 22 Tuckahoe Road, New Castle DE 19720; phone (302) 322-0948; Website www.jaysraceplace.com.

ANSWER — For Amos Beiler, who requested the Reader's Digest article Five Men Against the Sea: Emanuel Lantz, 5891 Meadville Rd., Narvon PA 17555, writes that he has the issue and Beiler is welcome to it.

ANSWER — To Debbie Mullinix, who wanted to know how to clean a copper apple butter kettle, Sanford and Thelma Landis suggest scrubbing with steel wool and vinegar. Oven cleaner may also work. Miriam Ruhl writes that Stanley Home Products sells a product called Copper & Brass Polish. You can request free catalogs or purchase it from Ruhl by calling (717) 653-4416.

ANSWER — To Larry Lassak, who requested information on where to purchase a good used golf cart to get around on the farm and wondered if there are any organizations to assist disabled farmers: Lawrence Stratton writes that Lassak's local cooperative extension office or extension agent can provide materials to modify equipment and provide engineering advice. Editor's note: The local Farm Service Agency office should also be able to help Lassak connect with AgrAbility, a USDA program to assist disabled farmers.

Farm Women Scholarship Winners Selected

JOYCE BUPP
York County Correspondent

GLEN ROCK (York Co.) — Fourteen $1,000 scholarships for advanced studies in home management or agriculture fields have been awarded by the Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women.

"We are able to award scholarships due to the continuing sales of our state society cookbook," says Naomi Bupp, Glen Rock, who coordinated compiling the popular cooking volume first published in March, 1991. The cookbook is now in its twelfth printing, and its receipts have enabled the Farm Women to award more than 97 scholarships over the last decade.

Farm Women members have traditionally contributed to a scholarship fund through their state dues, with 40-cents of each dues paid earmarked for youth education. With funds generated from the cookbook sales, the Society was able to double the original scholarship level of $500 per individual to $1,000. Eligibility for the scholarship is limited to children or grandchildren of Farm Women Society members, for studies at accredited schools and universities.

Scholarship winners for this year are from Berks, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Somerset, and York counties, pursuing college majors ranging from home management and economics to veterinary science.

For additional information on the Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women scholarships, contact Naomi Bupp, 1541 Woodland Road, Glen Rock, PA 17327.

would have survived until now," Melanie said.

Ian would like to expand the pig and veal operation and grow organic food. He said the barn is a bit antiquated but it works because they use pasturing.

He devised a portable pig pen attached to a fence. "It works like a plow," he said. The pigs eat at an area of pasture and then go on the a new area. The concept saves him from building fences and moving them.

He's experimenting by putting nests for chickens in the upper part. Chickens, he said, work well with pigs. They peck on the corn the pigs miss, and the pigs protect chickens from foxes and varmints.

Their parents continue the dairy end of the operation, but when they retire, Melanie plans to reduce the herd to 20 cows.

She said, "We are only using half to the milk for cheese now. The remainder is shipped to Dairy Farmers of America. Twenty cows would be a better fit for us."

Although they have the market to expand, Melanie likes the current schedule of only making cheese three times a week. But she would like to add pasteurization to allow her to make fresh cheeses and yogurt.

Melanie said, "We are very diversified with dairy, cheese, and meat. To be successful, it is necessary that each segment coexists and can't be separated from the other."

Contact Keswick Creamery, Melanie Dietrich Cochran, 114 Lesher Rd., Newburg, PA 17240 or phone (717) 423-6758.

AgrAbility For Pennsylvanians Endorses Occupational Therapy Month

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Each year occupational therapists help people whose lives have been affected by illness or injury. The people who benefit from those services range from children to senior citizens. Every day, occupational therapists help patients succeed in their 'occupations.'

For children with a chronic health condition that might mean helping them to learn, play, and grow; for working adults who have sustained a traumatic injury it could be helping them learn to perform an old job in a new way; or for retired adults who have suffered a stroke, it may be helping them learn to maintain an independent lifestyle.

"At AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians, we work closely with our clients' occupational therapists to provide a complete plan," says David Troutman, Case Manager with the Pennsylvania project. "We recognize the important role of the occupational therapist for our clients, and enthusiastically support National Occupational Therapy Month."

AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians assists farmers and farm family members who are coping with a disability or long-term illness. The objective is to help our clients achieve greater mobility and independence in their farming operations. To find out more about what AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians can do for you, call Troutman at (866) 238-4434 or visit the Project's website at http://AgExtEd.cas.psu.edu/agrab/.

USDA Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service currently funds a National AgrAbility Project and 21 state Projects.

The AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians is a joint effort between Penn State University and Easter Seals Central Pennsylvania. In addition to on-site technical assistance, staff offers information and referral, training for rural professionals, education on preventing additional injuries, and peer support groups.

Since 1991, AgrAbility Projects have provided assistance and accessibility solutions to over 11,000 farmers, ranchers, farmworkers, and their families.

Quality Lubricants From King Oil Co.
Hagerstown, MD

Proven → Super Solvent AW32
New → NT oil additive
Products → Skid Loader Oil
→ Hydraulic Oil

Also we stock the following:
Gas & Diesel motor oils.
SAE 30 and 40 15W40
(9.2 & 14 TBN);
3 grades of 10W30;
Regular Hyd. oils in 4 different viscosities
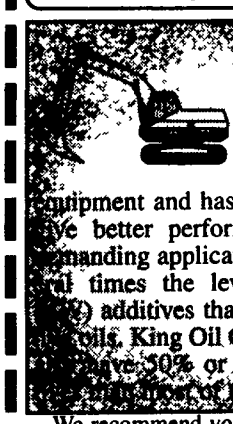
22 - 32 - 46 - 68 AW
Gear & Transmission Oils
Vacuum Pump Oils
Air Comp. & Air Tool Oils
Most of the above oils are available (many in stock) in factory blended NT additive versions. Also 2 cycle oils & hi-quality grease in stock.

Many people are aware that skid loader mfg's recommend using 10W30 motor oil in the skid loader hyd system. Most brands of hyd oils do not contain enough zinc (anti-wear additives) for satisfactory life in these hi-pressure hydrostatic systems. Most motor oils contain higher levels of zinc but have other additives that are not desirable in hydraulics. We now have a product called Skid Loader Oil. This high zinc oil is designed for hi pressure hydraulics and also contains full dosage of NT. Try it!

NT oil additive is a synthetic ester with a strong negative charge. Esters are much better lubricants than reg oil and have been around for a long time but this is a new type of ester. Its value in wear prevention in almost all equipment is outstanding. It also helps prevent seal leakage.



Hydraulic oil is a hyd. oil designed for and used in 1000's of Caterpillar excavating equipment and has been proven to give better performance in these demanding applications. It has several times the level of anti-wear (AW) additives than most standard hyd. oils. King Oil Co. std. hyd. oil has over 50% or more of the AW additives of the Cat oil.

Ask us about high efficiency bypass filtration that can double or triple the life of nearly all types of hydraulic systems. With the use of Super Solvent and NT, it is possible to achieve system cleanliness many times cleaner than the average system out there. This is what extends equipment life. The above may change the way you think about removing contamination from all types of machines.

We recommend you test all diesel engines (when draining oil) at least 1 time if you have never done so to establish oil drain intervals, regardless of the brand oil you use.

*Some may find the above hard to believe and say it is far out, but truthfully, it is not. Many things can be proven with used oil analysis. Even new oils can be tested to see if the manufacturer's claims are valid. We strongly recommend the use of independent laboratories that are not biased by any oil blender. We offer analysis kits from Wearcheck Labs in N.C. Engine oil test kits = $18.00 ea (includes TBN & TAN). Hyd. oil kits = $20.00 ea (includes particle count, spectrometric, water and acid tests). We can do filter patch tests no charge to customers - send us a sample in clean container (about 8 to 10 oz.).

Preventive Maintenance Pays - equipment downtime is costly!

Oil stocked in 1 & 5 gals. 55 gal drums and some in bulk (275 gal totes). We can deliver to your door. If you need price sheets or specification sheets and information booklets or technical information, write us or leave a voice mail. Or call 8:00 to 8:30 AM Mon. through Fri.

Let us know if you are interested in a monthly newsletter about equipment maintenance, product information & technical advice from John King and others in the industry.

Feed Bag Collecting Soars In Popularity

From Cloth To Burlap And Plastic Burlap, Farm Memorabilia Prized

JIMMY DeFILIPPIS
Special To Lancaster Farming

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Today we see products packaged in cardboard, plastic, and various space-age materials.

But a look into the past will reveal some rather marvelous (and natural) ways in which products were wrapped and stored.

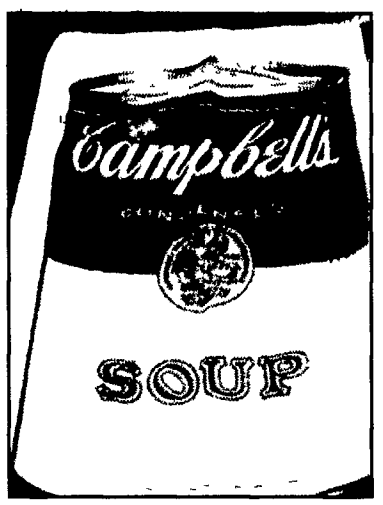
Collecting many treasured feed bags has become a serious hobby for many as a way of recapturing, in a way, a bygone era.

If you want to collect farm bag memorabilia, keep in mind several fundamentals.

First off, as with many collectible items, reproductions are a source of controversy and confusion. Know something about what you are trying to collect and who made it. Keep track of what others pay for these items.

Second, a little bit of history:

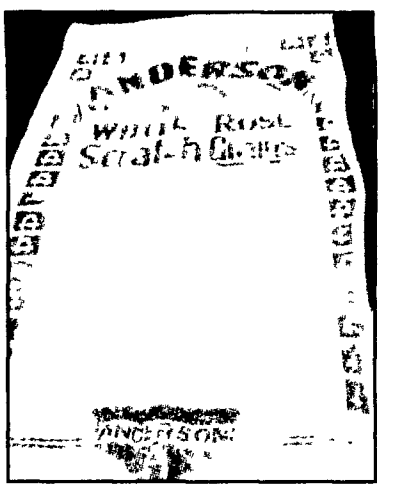
Feed bags have been with us for more than 100 years — originating in about 1850. As the population grew, more people used these bags as a way to ship goods from the farm to the city.



Back then, wooden barrels were still in vogue. But when the sewing machine was invented, many more bags could be sewed and readied for use by those who marketed grains and flour.

Storage was another factor that hastened the increased use of the feed bag. Silos in good harvest would fill quickly and excess had to be packaged or dumped.

The first feed bags were made of a combination of cotton and other readily available materials by the growing development of textile mills. Prior to this, bags were sewn by hand and made out of a patch quilt of bedsheets, articles of clothing, and even sails from ships.



All photos by Andy Andrews, editor

After the bags were sewn, the print or labeling on bags was done by a technique called wooden mold printing. Various colors — from black, the most widely used — to an array of every other primary color adorned the bags, which promoted various businesses.

Animal caricatures, products being sold, and even farm-related scenes and pictures could be found. Very often a company would have one of its employees design the labeling, or the bags would be manufactured by the mill itself.

When collecting feed bags, try to realize that back before newspapers and magazines, TV and radio, and long before the Internet, this labeling method was the first step in generating a wider market for the products being sold. A great deal of pride was reflected in putting together an embossed label that would attract attention and increase sales.

As the years passed, many of the bags became naturally discolored because they were exposed to the sun, endured bad weather, and survived washing. In addition, major destroyers of bags were rodents and insects.

The bags' greatest friends were cats and, yes, even the preying mantis, which were brought into the storage warehouses to control pests.

Feed bags come in a variety of materials, from cloth to burlap and to plastic burlap. Sometimes the burlap bags were used for certain crops such as potatoes, onions, and fruits to allow for aeration.

The value of bags vary from a few dollars to as high as $50 or more. Completeness, maximum color, animals, and representations of the products are most collectible. Smaller bags are highly desirable and any bags with a special quote or government label such as NRA are highly prized.

So the next time someone says it's just an old feed bag, think twice. And have some great feed bag hunting!

Collectible Flower, Bulb Pots Can Be Elegant Or Humble

With daffodils in bloom it's time to think Spring. What better way than to start a collection of unusual flower and bulb pots.

You may not even recognize a bulb pot and might think it is some type of candle holder. As for flower pots, they can be the start of a great collection. They can be of fine European or Chinese porcelain, or simple pottery.

They were made in many shapes and materials.

While flower pots have been made for centuries, pots made specifically to grow bulbs such as hyacinth and narcissus became popular around 1680. At that time hyacinths were imported to Europe from Asia Minor, thru Turkey.

The double flowering hyacinth we know today was developed in the Netherlands. By the 18th century growing bulbs becamse fashionable with royalty and the wealthy.

Madame de Pompador ordered 200 for hyacinth glasses and 363 for flower beds. Sevres porcelain was making ceramic bulb pots by 1756. These were baluster-shaped, hollow pedestals that were to be filled with water and were topped with fitted circular bulb holders with pierced collars.

They quickly became fashionable in England where famous potteries like Josiah Wedgwood, Worcester and Staffordshire created their own styles...in earthenware.

By 1782 the fashion for growing bulbs in water , had caught the fancy of the general public. However English potters adapted the hollow flower brick with holes for bulbs to be displayed.

It was Josiah Wedgwood, him-

Flower, Bulb Pots

self an avid gardner who added his touch to the look of the bulb pot. He created a large earthenware pot that could hold five bulbs.

Glazes were often agate or black basalt with encaustic decoration, and standing 7½ inches high. His other innovations were bulb pots that could hold candles in place of the bulbs and with the use of addition fittings could be used for cut flowers.

Wedgwood also added a light touch to the bulb pot with his hedgehog crocus-pot. This was a hollow receptable modeled in the form of a hedgehog. The bristle body was pierced by holes for crocus bulbs. A tray came with it that was packed with moss or soil.

No English porcelain bulb pots were made before 1770.

Shapes continually changed as did the materials used. The more unique the form that more expensive. A good example is a crocus pot in the form of a commode, Qianlong, China, c. 1770. It sold for over $6,000 at auction several years ago.

Wedgwood Jasperware offered a variety of shapes from a square to a vase form In 19th century America potteries such as Bennington made flowerpots of stoneware and redware. Since they were rarely decorated, when one is discovered, as a rarity it can be expensive.

In the mid 19th century bulb vases were maded in cut and patterned pressed glass.

Some of the most colorful pressed glass examples were made by the Boston & Sandwich glass company in America.

CLUES: The early blue and white flower bricks continue to be reproduced and can be found in museum gift shops. Nineteenth century glass bulb vases often turn up at garage sales, un-recognized. Or, also, reproduced in museum gift shops.

Depending where you find them, prices can be modest. When identified, at auctions and shows, prices can range from $100 up.

Heritage Center Museum To Host Antiques Forum

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Heritage Center Museum of Lancaster County is hosting a "Show and Tell" Antiques Forum, featuring a variety of topics presented "show and tell" style, slated for Saturday, April 26, from 9:30 a.m.-3 p.m. at the Jasper Yeates Education Center, 24 S. Queen St., downtown Lancaster. The fee, which includes a catered lunch, is $30 per person, non-members, or $25 per person, museum members.

Museum professionals and nationally-recognized antiques experts will discuss their latest findings, discoveries, and research on a variety of subjects. Speakers will highlight their talks with slides and the presentation of actual artifacts.

Scheduled lecturers and their topics include: Karl Pass, curator, Cumberland County Historical Society, folk carvings of Wilhelm Schimmel; Edward F. LaFond Jr., antiques restoration consultant, Pennsylvania tall case clocks; and Stella Rubin and Anne Lewis, authors, Amish and Mennonite stuffed toys and animals, and Matthew R. Miller, stoneware pottery of southcentral Pennsylvania.

For more information and to make reservations, contact Sheila Rohrer at the Heritage Center Museum of Lancaster County at (717) 299-6440 or e-mail at heritage paonline.com.

Antique Show in Christiana April 26-27

CHRISTIANA (Lancaster Co.) — The Octorara Rotary Club is providing an opportunity for dealers and collectors alike to share in the rich antique heritage that Lancaster County has to offer as the club hosts the third annual Christiana Antique Show, April 26-27, in the newly restored Christiana Freight Station.

The show will feature two floors of fine antiques from a total of 16 local dealers. Admission is $3, which is a small price to pay for a peak at the community's finest historical treasures.

The show will also feature antique appraisals for the general public by the trained eye of John A. Shuman, III, for a fee of $5. Food and beverages will also be available to complete the event.

Visitors to the show will find an astounding array of textiles and quilts, formal and country furniture, folk art, items of childhood whimsy, baskets, early glassware, pottery, and porcelain. Patrons can literally stroll through the past as they peruse through aisles and aisles of Lancaster's premier antiques.

Show hours are from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. on Saturday, April 26 and Sunday, April 27. Interested dealers and patrons should contact Bob Bruno at (717) 442-4163 for more information on getting involved in this upcoming community event.

Lanco Manufacturing Introduces Spreader

BIRD IN HAND (Lancaster Co.) — Lanco Manufacturing has introduced the Super-Spread, a complete line of bedding spreaders.

The spreaders are able to transport and spread not only typical bedding materials, but a broad variety of other materials. With three drive styles and five sizes, there is a unit designed for any need.

Heavy-duty hydraulic pumps and motors drive dual 23½-inch spinners. The conveyor belt, combined with a manual metered end gate, contributes to precision spreading. Depending on the model, there is a remote control panel that can be mounted in the towing vehicle's cab for added convenience.

The versatility and heavy duty galvanized construction of these spreaders allow salt and antiskid material to be spread in the winter months while wood shavings, sawdust, sand, mulch, and more can be used in the warmer months. Even litter-laden broiler bedding can be spread on fields.

Various options are available that add to the already "operator friendly," efficient performance of these very cost-effective spreaders. The SuperSpread creates precise depths and uniform application of bedding for broiler houses, dairy barns, and more.

Cut-Out Clutch Protection
No more burnt or hot discs to wrestle with. Great protection for those times when your baler's pulling harder on the outside rows, the tractor's overpowered, or you accidently overfill when trying to bale that last strip of hay

Here's why:

- 5-bar pickup handles bigger windrows, faster speeds
- Simple, horizontal bale-starting system is designed for fast starts
- Bottom drum design lets you pull in hay faster, often allowing you to drive a full gear faster
- Best HaySaver Wheels in the field.
- Up to 1200 lbs. in a single 65" dia. x 48" wide package; 2000 lb capacity with silage baler option
- Silage option lets you bale wet or dry without changing a thing
- Make bales 17% larger* than a standard 5' dia. x 4' wide baler at virtually the same price!*

 determined by comparing volume measurement of a standard 60" dia x 48" wide bale versus a 65" dia x 48" wide Vermeer bale*

 Price comparison is based on published list prices (Y2000) between Vermeer 554XL Series Baler and other 5' x 4' competitive round baler models*

Vermeer

BEST SEAT ON THE FARM.
Step inside. Have a seat. You'll find the layout simple, the view terrific with all the controls right at your fingertips. The focal point is the new console that moves with the deluxe Grammer air-ride seat and features an easy-to-use hydrostatic control handle. The overhead monitor is microprocessor based to provide quick, precise readouts of machine performance. And the exclusive Fieldstar DataTouch screen lets you track yields with a tap of the finger. See your Massey Ferguson Dealer today and check out all the great features on the new MF 9000 Series Class VI and VII combines. Then, enjoy the best seat on the farm from the most productive combine in the field.

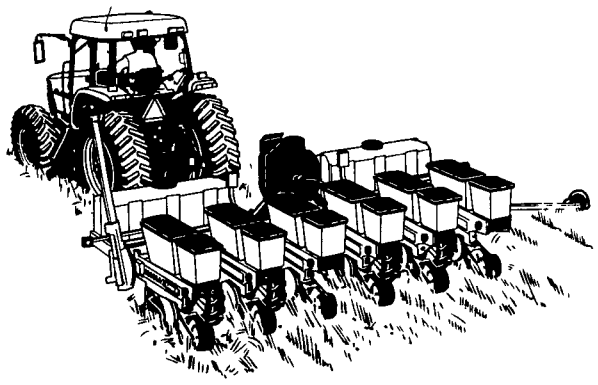
Planting a Radical Idea



1200 Series ASM Planters

Here's an idea that will really grow on you - the Case IH 1200 Series ASM planters These planters feature the most accurate metering system in the industry by utilizing the Advanced Seed Meter (ASM) and Early Riser ® row unit to ensure accuracy and productivity The Early Riser row unit puts you in control of your crop's potential while the ASM system ensures accuracy in population control and in-row seed spacing These two features combine for early and even emergence and high yield potential The 1200 Series planters allow you to cover more acres in less time without sacrificing productivity and accuracy Select from four models in nine configurations for a customized solution for your crops and acreage All this, and flexible financing, reliable parts and fast service, are available from your Case IH dealer

- 1250 Planters
- 6 Row Narrow
- Deluxe Monitoring
- Dry Fertilizer
- Insecticide Units

Everlast laps better.

Everlast II metal roofing and siding overlaps are stronger, tighter, and virtually invisibile. Lap edges are less subject to deforming bends during erection. Driving rain is less likely to penetrate at the laps.

Imported from Holland, ORLANDO is a black 17.1 Hand Dutch Harness Horse Stallion.

The Dutch Harness Horse is a wonderful horse to cross with existing breeds of horses used for driving and work. Dutch Harness Horses have been bred in Holland for over 80 years. The sole purpose is to increase trot and stride, thus producing driving horses that move more efficiently and cover more ground with less effort.

Exciting opportunities exist for the serious breeder looking to be involved with the induction and infusion of these great horses into today's breeding programs.

ORLANDO is standing at Mogadore, Ohio for the 2003 breeding season, shipped semen is available. The 2003 introductory stud fee is $1000.00 and includes a live foal guarantee.

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Long-Term Lease on Trophy Whitetail Operation

Bakersville, PA

Have you always wanted to operate your very own trophy whitetail ranch? Well, here's your chance to manage a long-term hunting lease. The Highlands has gained a world-class reputation for producing some of the biggest trophy whitetail bucks in the country. Over five miles of game-proof fence (ten-feet high) surround the perimeter of this 800-acre ranch that is conveniently located in the Laurel Mountains of Somerset County, PA (about an hour southeast of Pittsburgh.)

The 4,000 square foot lodge can comfortably sleep up to 16 guests and includes four full baths and two half-baths, a commercial kitchen and large great room with massive fireplace. Also included is a 2-bedroom A-frame cottage and numerous out-buildings and fishing ponds. The ranch adjoins the Hidden Valley ski and golf resort and can serve as a perfect family or corporate retreat in addition to trophy whitetail hunting.

If you want to continue to operate the deer hunting business commercially we will give you a ready-made list of hundreds of our customers and thousands of prospects that we have compiled over the past seven seasons. Or, you can just keep the ranch for yourself, your family and friends as a private, year-around retreat. A long-term lease will ensure your enjoyment for years to come. Offered at $395,000. For more details:

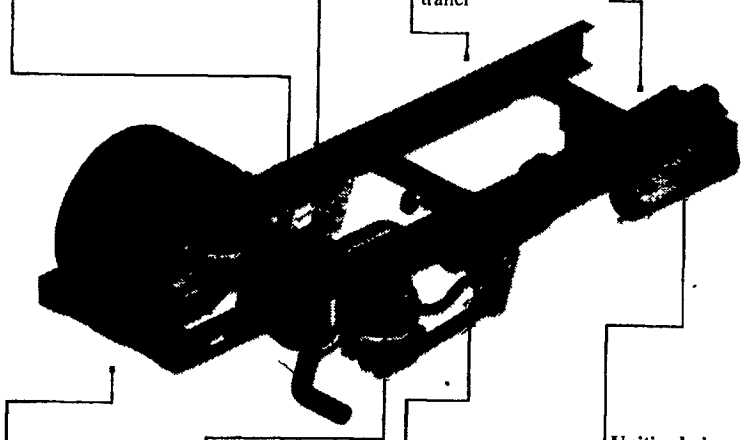
Air Ride For Pick-Up Trucks
UltraRide Chassis Air Suspension
Fords: 250, 350, 450, 550
Chevy: 4500, 5500



Tuned shock absorbers for maximum comfort and stability

Lateral control device assures alignment and tracking, enhancing driving stability

Optional kneeling function allows the rear of the truck to be lowered for easier connection or detachment of your trailer

Parallelogram design allows for improved drive line angle throughout the range of travel

Uses existing frame holes and there are no exhaust modifications.

Rate tailored air spring with internal stop, provides best ride and eliminates harsh shocks

Dual height control valves for system stability
• Maintains optimal ride height, loaded or unloaded
• Spec'd for system

Unitized air control system offers protection from weather and road grime, providing longer life and easier serviceability.

NEED A MORTGAGE?

We are the alternative to conventional institutional mortgages. Our money comes from private sources. Therefore, we can be flexible in arranging mortgages to suit individual requirements.

Also, possible leases with options to buy.

If a mortgage is too big for the Red Neck Mortgage Company, we have direct access to several major Wall Street firms where nothing is too big.

DAIRY RESEARCH PROGRAM

• New Applications • Product Development

Initial development work is conducted at the Ruminant Intensive Research Unit at the Decatur, IN Research Center. At this facility, with 20 cannulated lactating cows, research emphasizes the development of products and feeding programs that improve rumen function.

From this initial development work, products with commercial applications are evaluated at the Twin Oaks Dairy, a 500-cow dairy unit at Emmittsburg, MD.

The Twin Oaks Dairy field research is a key segment of the successful dairy feed product development program for Alliance Nutrition. At this facility, individual cow identification, daily milk production and weekly measurements of milk components enable us to monitor and evaluate individual cow response to the ingredients, feed products and feeding programs being tested.

This data is used to validate the commercial success of the Alliance Nutrition dairy feeding programs and enhances the confidence of commercial success of these products and programs for our dairy customers.

TeamAg, Inc., based in Lancaster County, PA provides agricultural consulting services throughout the Northeastern states. TeamAg offers a team of Certified Engineers, Nutrient Management Planners, Agronomists, and Precision-Ag Specialists.

With lower interest rates and the continued high demand for dairy and livestock products, many producers are now considering whether to expand, and what possibilities exist for their farm operation. What kinds of permits are now required for an expansion? How can a site be developed for an expansion? How will the increased volume of manure be managed? What must be done to comply with new regulations? TeamAg has the expertise to answer these questions and assist you in making confident decisions. We meet our client's needs by using the newest technologies, while providing competitive pricing and excellent customer service.

Odor from large hog confinement facilities has been a major concern for many years. To address these concerns, Jennifer Reed, Nutrient Compliance Director for Country View Family Farms, right, and Chris Frame, nutrient management specialist with Hostetter Management Company, are constantly looking for new methods of manure odor control.

Aeration Key To Reducing Manure Odors From Sow Operation

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

GILLETT (Bradford Co.) — Manure odor from large farming operations has been a major issue, especially among the rural non-farm public, for many years.

However, for the neighbors of the Pine Hill Sow Farm, located in northern Bradford County, the familiar smell of hog manure has proven to be less offensive over the past year. This is due largely to the ongoing research conduced by Country View Family Farms along with Hostetter Management Company.

In September of 2001, workers at the Pine Hill facility implemented a new aeration system in their manure pit. When spreading began in the spring and summer of 2002, the manure had a less pungent odor, according to area farmers and the workers at the facility.

In fact, operators at the Pine Hill facility reported that there were no odor complaints to the farm last summer.

"A lack of response — I think indicates that it's working. I'm proud of this past year when we had no calls complaining about odor," said Chris Frame, a nutrient management specialist with Hostetter Management Co. LLC.

"Prior to this past year there were always a few calls that would come in."

The technology is simple. Air from a single five horsepower pump is forced through tubing, which lies at the bottom of the lined lagoon, and is released through four cross-shaped diffusers.

The result is that air is constantly being pumped through the slurry, creating an aerobic condition and reducing the odor. Liquid bacteria are also placed in the manure pits under the barns, which flow into the aerated lagoon.

The addition of liquid bacteria has been tested independently on other sow farms and finishing operations with mixed results. Some farmers have noticed a reduction of odors with the bacteria alone however, according to Frame, "We get a bigger bang for our buck when we do it (addition of bacteria) in conjunction with this aeration system."

"Our focus of why we are really doing this," said Jennifer Reed, nutrient compliance director for Country View Family Farms, "is we wanted to address the community's concerns of odor from the lagoons and odor from land application. That's where we have been getting the majority of complaints. That's why we chose this system, because it targets those issues."

This system has also been replicated at the Sullivan Township pig farm in Tioga County, to address odor concerns at that facility. The Sullivan farm is almost identical in size and scale to the Pine Hill facility.

The group of decision makers settled on this type of aeration system after reviewing many other methods.

"When you have a poly lined lagoon, you've got to be careful because of your liner. There is another type of aeration that is a floating unit where it's supposed to force air down in, however, our evaluation indicates that this is more effective. We've got the air starting at the bottom and coming up," said Frame.

At the Pine Hill Farm, 2,800 sows are housed in a farrow-to-wean barn.

Each sow has about 11 piglets per litter. The piglets remain on the farm until they weigh about 14 pounds. At that point they are trucked to a nursery farm, where they are kept until they weigh between 45 and 50 pounds. From there, the piglets are trucked to finishing farms where they reach a weight of 240-250 pounds. The Pine Hill Facility has been in operation since 1996.

Some of the manure generated by the farrowing facility is spread on the farm's 130 tillable acres.

"When we really notice (the difference in the odor) is on application of the manure when we spread. My subjective feeling is that we have a 50 percent reduction. We had a third party come in from the Midwest and evaluate when we were doing it and I think it's fair to say with their analysis that we were indeed reducing the odor," said Frame.

To comply with nutrient management regulations, the remainder of the manure is given to 20 area farmers free of charge, under agreements that require certain application rates and usage. Some of these farmers noticed the changes in the amount of odor immediately.

"We had one guy who takes manure from the lagoon ask, 'if it doesn't stink, is it any good?' He was concerned that it wasn't doing what it was supposed to do. Another farmer asked what we were doing differently," said Frame.

Another local farmer, who has been getting manure from the sow farm since it was built, noticed the difference immediately. He claims that the manure doesn't have the odor that it once had and that the odor doesn't linger in the air nearly as long.

Jennifer Reed notes that there is a tremendous demand for the manure from the pits.

"Farmers want this manure. They've seen what it can do for their crops and there's actually a waiting list," Reed said.

An added benefit of aerating the manure is that you have a more consistent product to spread on the fields.

"We have a running average of samples of the manure that is taken out of the pit," said Frame. "It we were to take 10 samples after the first 5 loads and 10 samples after 10 loads and after 15, I think we'd have more consistency in the sample results, whereas before, if you did that same pattern, we'd probably have less consistency in the analysis. In terms of change in the nutrient content, I don't think we're doing that and that's not our intent," said Frame.

Current nutrient management plans are based on nitrogen, however phosphorus has been gaining more attention in the past several years.

Yet another strategy Country View Family Farms implements through the feed company is the addition of phytase, a natural enzyme, into the sow's feed. This enzyme increases phosphorus use by the animal, reducing the mineral in the manure by 50 percent over the last five years.

"Penn State has typical averages for the state of what your manure analysis should be for nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, and what we've seen in our manure results is that in our manure samples, our phosphorus is a lot lower than the state average," said Reed.

"We're going to be involved with a phosphorous study with Penn State this spring," said Frame.

Reed added that Country View Family Farms works with many different groups on several projects aimed at farming more efficiently and improving public perception.

"One project that we're working with most hand in hand is that Pennsylvania has a nutrient management plan based on nitrogen and they're coming out with phosphorous indexing.

"Chris and I knew that our phosphorous levels were a lot less than the state average, so we kind of got some conversations started and they're going to come up and do some sampling of manure, they're going to look at soils and at phosphorus run-off and other things that tie in with the phosphorous indexing with the state, to get some really solid data.

"They're going to use several of our sow, nursery and finishing farms to do that research," said Reed.

Another project that will be conducted with Penn State is the use of a methane digester.

"My opinion is that with any industry, you talk to other people who are in the industry all throughout," said Reed.

"We're watching what they had to do in North Carolina, we're working with people out in Iowa and Kansas and watching what's going on out there, from feed to aeration to cover to separators and trying to soak it all in and come up with the best things to use.

"We're basically going anyplace that someone is using the technology that might work for us."

They also constantly get calls from representatives who want them to try new products. They must weed through all the options to find the products that really work.

Country View Family Farms oversees 26 sow farms varying in size from 400 to more than 4,000. Pleasant Valley Foods owns the pigs, Country View Family Farms represents the interests of the pig owners, and Hostetter Management Company has been contracted by Country View Family Farms to manage all their swine farms.

"There are a lot of contract finishers throughout the state and nearly all of them are family farms," said Frame. "Even some of our sow farms are owned by individuals and we contract them."

(Turn to Page 9)

Aeration Key

"With a management company, we have access to veterinary resources, nutrition resources, environmental permitting and all of those types of things," said Reed. "A big benefit is if they need a nutrient management plan, one will be written for them."

Even with the positive measures that have been undertaken, Country View Family Farms and Hostetter Management still are victims of public perception.

"I think that what we are the victim of right now — and this is my own personal opinion — is the Internet," said Reed.

"You can put anything you want on the Internet. I go to these meetings and I hear doctors and lawyers quoting things from the Internet that aren't even right. What's on the internet sells on emotion."

"Agriculture is being driven to get bigger, and we can argue the good and bad of that, but it's just the economic facts," said Frame. "I always come back to anyone who says that farms have gotten too big and that we need to go back to the old days by saying, where are the people who will have all the small farms and try to make a living?"

They also hear the argument that people should support local farms and butcher shops and, Reed agrees, for rural residents, it is possible to travel to a local butcher shop to purchase meats.

"What they're forgetting that there's a New York City and a Philadelphia and a Washington DC and those people want to buy meat and eggs too and they can't drive up here to get it," she said.

Both Reed and Frame agree that all the arguments will never be won, however, they are confident that they are doing all they can to help alleviate the concerns of the public.

"We're spending the majority of our time on research, quantifying and looking for things to do better and be better neighbors and to address the community's concerns. We realize that there are some people who just don't want a poultry barn or a pig barn and we'll never appease them.

There are also some people who would just like it to not smell as much and if there are things that we can do like this, we'll do it. Every day society is getting smarter, research is getting better, technology is changing and there are new things being invented.

"We just want people to allow us to get smarter. To do the research and find what works," said Reed.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Nutrient management plan reviewers-in-training gathered here recently for an all-day workshop conducted by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA).

Christian Sautter of PDA's nutrient management certification program led the workshop. Doug Goodlander, nutrient management program director with the State Conservation Commission (SCC), and Jerry Martin, Penn State nutrient management agent from Lancaster County, also presented portions of the day's agenda.

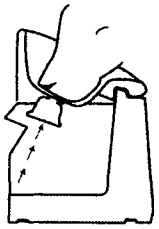
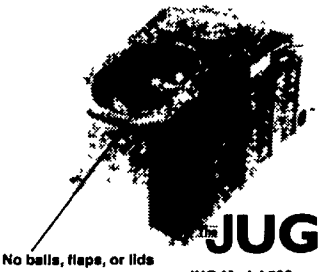
The JUG Livestock Waterer Cleans Itself - so you don't have to!



The JUG's Feed-Trap catches debris and keeps it out of the reservoir.



No balls, flaps, or lids to get in the way

JUG Model 202 1-hole and 4-hole models also available

The JUG'S self-cleaning design
The JUG'S Feed-Trap™ design prevents feed and other debris from entering the reservoir tank. Each time the animal drinks, any debris in the Feed-Trap is removed The tank stays clean!

No Algae - No slime
Since the JUG's reservoir is light-tight, no algae will grow in it. That means no slime build-up

Clean Water = productivity
You know that animals will drink more when the water is clean. And more water consumption yields more productivity

Tough, long-lasting construction
The JUG is made of tough, roto-molded plastic. It stands up to abuse dished out by livestock It won't chip and pit like concrete

Nutrient Plan Reviewers Hone Skills

Workshop participants from conservations districts across Pennsylvania reviewed an actual nutrient management plan to identify inconsistencies, incomplete information, and other flaws in the plan.

The detailed exercise was part of the process of learning how to make sure livestock producers with concentrated livestock operations submit final plans that are complete and accurate.

"Some of these plans take three or four revisions before they're ready to present to the board," Goodlander said.

After a nutrient management plan is first submitted, reviewers have 90 days to work with the producer to ensure the plan is ready.

According to Sautter, nutrient management planning is an ongoing process.

"It is constantly being refined," he said. "It's the science of it that changes."

Reviewers must also take orientation and plan writing workshops and pass an environmental knowledge examination in order to be provisionally certified. After satisfactorily reviewing two nutrient management plans, they receive full certification.

Soil fertility and manure management workshops are also "highly recommended," Sautter said.

Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act (NMA) is in the process of being revised by the SCC, along with the input of a state nutrient management advisory board consisting of farmers, agribusinesspersons, conservation planners, scientists, and representatives of state agencies, including the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection. Final draft revisions are expected to be ready for legislative consideration by early in 2004, according to Goodlander.

Key changes proposed in the NMA draft include incorporating a phosphorus index (P-index), requiring verification of conservation plans prior to nutrient management plan approval, certification of commercial manure exporters, and additional restrictions on manure storage and application.

Concerning phosphorus-based nutrient management, an initial review of about 500 fields on 11 farms (with both low and high concentrations of livestock) in the state showed about 20 percent of the fields will require phosphorus management, according to Goodlander.

New Ovine Laparoscopic Equipment At New Bolton Center

Dr. Regina Turner

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — The Georgia and Philip Hofmann Center for Reproductive Studies at New Bolton Center has acquired new, state-of-the-art Ovine Laparoscopy equipment. This allows the Center to offer laparoscopic artificial insemination and embryo transfer to small ruminant patients.

Laparoscopic artificial insemination in sheep and goats currently is the preferred method for breeding these small ruminants with frozen-thawed semen.

Using the laparoscope, semen is deposited directly into the uterine horn, thus placing the sperm in close proximity to the site of fertilization. This increases the chances for pregnancy, particularly when dealing with small numbers of sperm (as is the case with frozen semen).

Before an animal can undergo this procedure, her estrous cycle must be synchronized with hormones. This allows ovulation to be very exactly timed. At around the time of ovulation, the procedure is performed.

The ewe may or may not be sedated and a local anesthetic is injected at the surgical site.

The ewe then is suspended by her hind legs in a specially-designed cradle. This position helps to insure that the rumen and intestines are not in the way of the surgery.

A small hole (usually less than a centimeter) is made through the animal's body wall and into her abdomen. The laparoscope is inserted through the hole. The uterus and ovaries generally are easy to see through the laparoscope.

Once the reproductive tract has been identified, a second, similar hole is made into the abdomen and a small insemination instrument containing the semen is passed through the hole.

The surgeon then can watch through the laparoscope and guide the insemination instrument to the uterus where a small needle at the end of the insemination instrument is used to puncture into the uterus. Semen then is injected directly into the uterine lumen.

The instruments are withdrawn and the small holes are closed with one suture each. In the hands of an experienced surgeon, the entire procedure can take less than 10 minutes. Most ewes stand as soon as they are released from the cradle and suffer no after effects. As with any surgical technique, there can be complications. But these are rare and usually are minor.

Ovine Laparoscopic

Pregnancy rates vary depending on the breed, the season and the semen quality. Highly fertile ewes under excellent management and bred in season can experience pregnancy rates as high as 80%, although more typical ranges are from 40 to 70 percent in season.

These kinds of pregnancy rates make this procedure very practical for valuable animals and open up the possibility of using imported frozen semen from some of the most valuable males in the world.

Another assisted reproductive technique that is gaining in popularity with small ruminant breeders is embryo transfer.

Embryo transfer greatly increases the potential number of offspring that a single, valuable female can produce in a year.

This can be of great economic benefit to producers and also can help propagate valuable genetics on the female side.

For this procedure, the donor animal's estrous cycle and the estrous cycle of a group of recipient (surrogate) females are synchronized hormonally. Additionally, the donor animal is given hormones that make her ovulate a very large number of eggs (sometimes more than 10 each cycle). The donor is bred either naturally or laparoscopically at a set time.

Several days after the breeding, the donor ewe is placed under anesthesia. A surgical incision is made in her abdomen and her uterus is exteriorized. A small incision is made in the uterus and a tube is threaded into the uterine lumen. Flush media is injected through the catheter and collected.

Hopefully, this media rinses the embryos out of the uterus. The media is searched under a microscope and embryos are identified. The incision is sutured closed and the ewe recovers from the anesthetic. Any resulting embryos can be frozen for long term storage or they can be immediately transferred into a synchronized recipient.

For the actual embryo transfer, the recipient ewe is sedated and an appropriate number of embryos are placed into her uterus with the help of the laparoscope. The recipient ewe then carries the pregnancy for the donor ewe.

As many as 15 embryos can be recovered from a single flush, although more typically the number ranges between five and ten.

Spring Sheep And Goat Thoughts

Betty Herr
Nix Besser Livestock Company

NARVON (Lancaster Co.) — The flock and/or herd has weathered the winter, hopefully provided a crop of lambs and kids, either in the fall or early winter, and is ready for a change of pace.

At least the shepherds and goat herders are ready for that change. Shoveling paths for the animals is not high on the list of our favorite things and this winter we certainly had to do at least some of that.

Spring is here though, and after the winter we've had, it is welcome. However, it brings with it a set of activities for the shepherds among us. First and foremost for sheep owners is getting on a list for sheep shearing. Sheep shearers are in short supply and you should get yours lined up early.

Mid-March is an ideal time to start getting those gals shorn, especially if you are aiming for an early breeding program. Certainly try to get it done before the weather gets really warm. Then it is hard on both the shearer and the sheep.

Along with shearing should come a worming schedule. Through the cold weather, internal parasites are relatively dormant. But once warmer weather comes, those worms are on the move.

There is significant controversy about which wormers, how often, the same wormer all the time or alternating wormers. These are good questions to ask your veterinarian the next time you talk to him/her.

If you've only had sheep or goats for a short time and have acres of pasture, internal parasites may not be a big concern, but if you've had either for years and have limited pasture, parasites will be a problem.

There are several types of worming medications so it may be important to know which parasites are most prevalent in your flock or herd. Collecting representative samples of manure and having the vet do fecal egg counts will give you information about which dewormer will work best on your group of animals.

As you determine a worming schedule be sure to include a wormer for tape worm sometime late in May or early in June, particularly for your young animals. Feeding tape worms is an expensive and nonproductive proposition.

One family of wormers, Ivermectin and Zimectin will treat external as well as internal parasites. Safeguard/Panacur and Valbazen are effective against tape. Valbazen should not be used on pregnant animals or just prior to breeding.

Some breeders report that its use will interfere with breeding for one or two cycles. It is important when treating animals to use sufficient amounts of wormer to accomplish your goal.

Under dosing will diminish the effectiveness of the wormer and eventually the animals will build up resistance to various medications. Parasite behave pretty much the same in both sheep and goats, however in treating goats it is important to increase the dosage by at least half and in some cases double the dose.

(Turn to Page 17)

Goats metabolize most medicines differently than sheep and most often require higher doses.

With spring comes melting snow, rain, and that harbinger of every spring ... mud. Sheep and goats on wet, muddy pastures and lots can lead to foot problems, mostly foot rot. It is important to keep an – Ceiling systems designed for your dairy, swine, and poultry facilities, as well – as shops, warehouses, garages, arenas, and more.

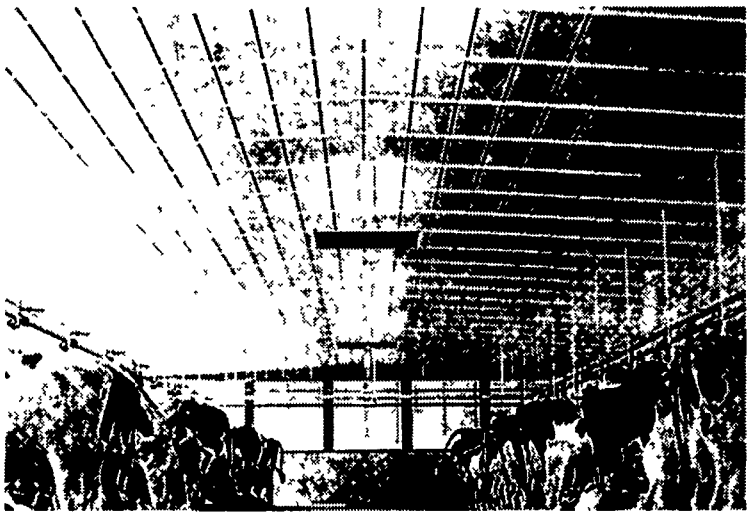
Tired of working in a cold, noisy shop?

These ceiling systems are designed to hold any amount of insulation, and with insulation above, produce sound reduction qualities much greater than steel.

Is the banding in your hog or poultry barn deteriorating?

Let us replace them with our heavier polyester bands which do not stretch or become brittle over time.



Are you frustrated with the birds in your implement shed?

Get the problem under control with a triply ceiling, as well as greatly improving the lighting.

Contemplating a drop ceiling?

Demand a triply ceiling above your drop ceiling if there is insulation being installed. This will serve as a vapor barrier along with permanently preventing falling insulation.

eye on your animals and when you see one of them limping, catch them up and check their feet. It may just be mud caked in the hooves or it may be foot rot.

Keep a sharp pair of trimmers in your back pocket and a bottle of Hoff 'N Heel handy. Trim back the hooves and check for rot.

Treat with an appropriate medicine and keep an eye on them. If the problem seems widespread, check with your vet about a systemic treatment and set up a foot bath situation so that the animals must walk through it a couple of times a day.

Again, check with your vet about the effectiveness of various materials which can be used in the foot baths.

Long-term, see if there are ways to configure your barnyard situation to reduce or eliminate places where water and mud collects. Sometimes a little timely scraping and spreading a little stone can make life a lot better for the flock or herd.

The best markets for lambs and goats is late fall and early winter. That means they should be dropped in September and October. In order to get such lambs and kids to market weight, the ewes or does should be bred in April and May.

For some sheep and goat breeds which are not polyestrous it may be necessary to resort to various cycling methods, either natural using light, or through chemical means. Again, your vet would be a good source of information.

If you have young animals on the ground at this time several things should be considered. First of all, a creep area is very important to getting your babies to market at optimum weight and as quickly as possible.

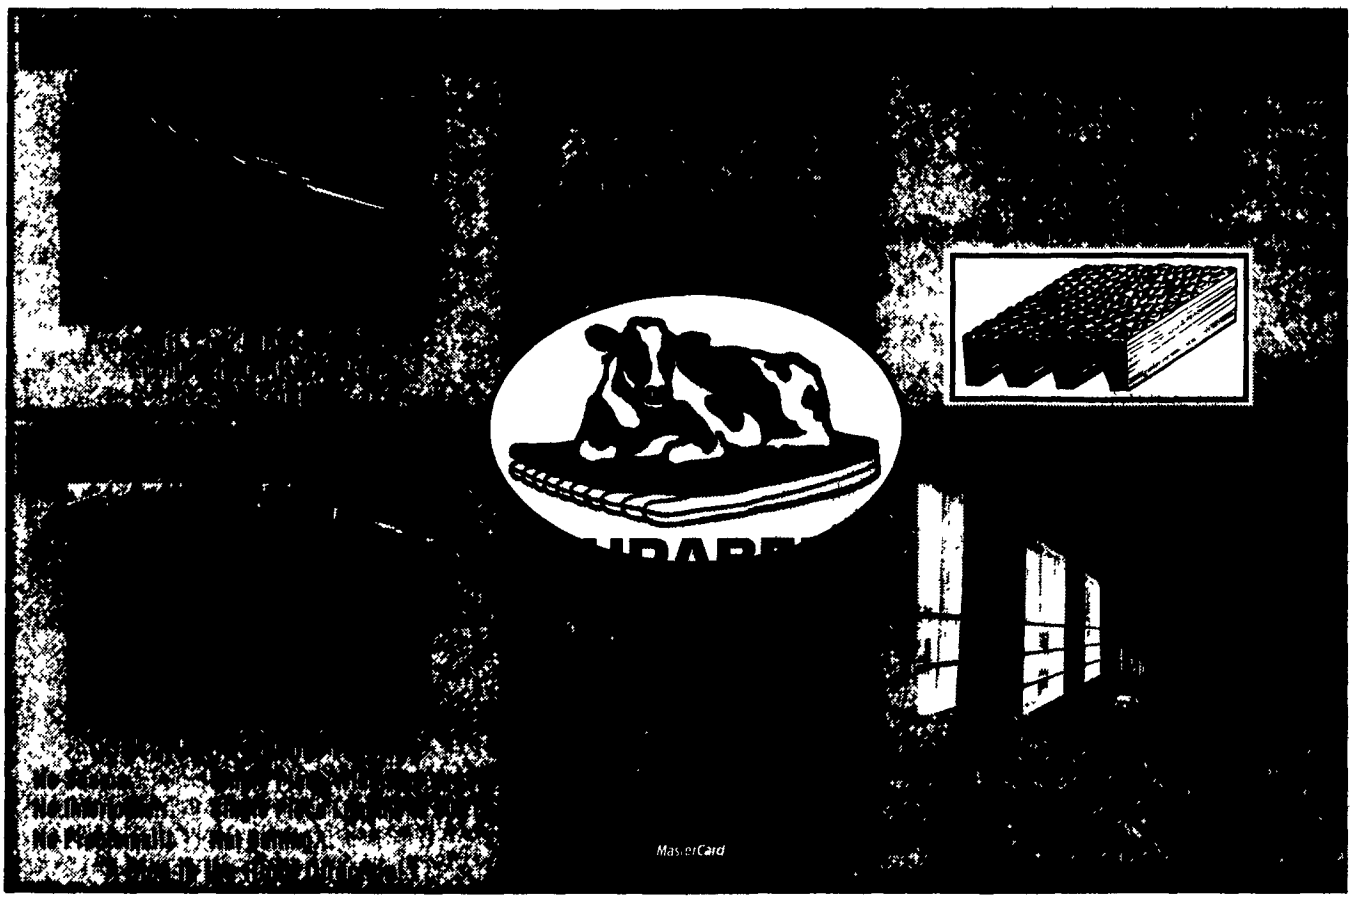
As early as three or four days of age, lambs and kids will begin to pick at feed and hay. Good quality feed appropriate for young animals and a good quality hay should be available to them at all times.

Unless you plan to keep ewe lambs, docking tails and castrating ram lambs or male kids are unnecessary activities. They do not add to the value of the animals in the marketplace and they place great stress on the animals.

However, vaccinating for entertoxemia (commonly called "overeating") with Clostridium Perfringens Types C & D along with Tetanus is an excellent practice. The first dose is given at two to three weeks and a second dose is given three weeks later.

There is a withdrawal period so be aware of this as you plan your marketing schedule. The vaccine is inexpensive and the loss of one lamb or kid to enterotoxemia could buy many doses of vaccine.

(Turn to Page 19)



Sheep And Goat

Finally, the question of whether to wean or not to wean before marketing lambs or kids is important. Major buyers recognize whether a lamb or kids is "fresh" or not. In the best case scenario, babies go directly from their mother to the buyer.

Weaning is an added stress to animals and it takes several days to a couple of weeks to get them through the weaning period. They lose their bloom or freshness quickly when they are weaned.

Of course they regain some of that once they are through the weaning period.

Attached is a calendar with many holidays listed where sheep and goats are in demand. And in addition to these ethnic and religious holidays, our American type holidays such as Mother's Day, Father's Day, Memorial Day, and the Fourth of July create demand for goats and lambs among many cultures.

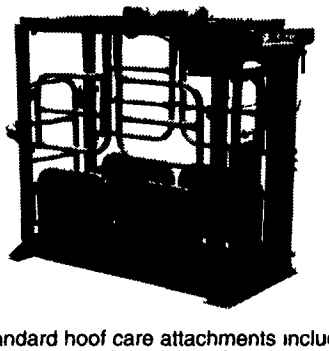
Combination Hoof Care/Vet Chute

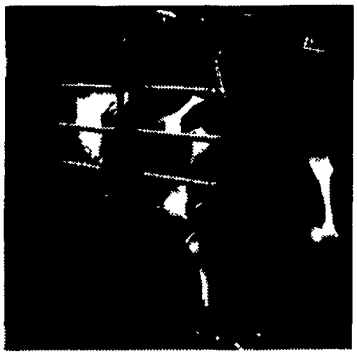


This highly versatile equipment can be used to secure a cow safely and efficiently for foot care or veterinary services

Side panels and gates easily replace hoof care accessories to create a vet chute where almost any common vet procedure can be performed.

Standard hoof care attachments include; a rear splatter board, rear foot winch, two front foot winches and a full width belly band and winch to lift the animals weight off their feet. All winches have heavy duty friction brakes providing constant, positive holding action

ALL STEEL PARTS ARE POWDER COATED USING THE PBZ FIVE-STEP PROCESS



Once in the chute with the belly band winched into working position, the cow is safely secured for foot treatment.

Study Confirms Handling Link In 'Downer' Pigs

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Pork producers who raise heavily muscled market hogs should take notice of a new study unveiled at the American Society of Animal Science annual meeting held in Indianapolis. It shows clear benefits of using gentle methods to move pigs from farm to market — methods that may eliminate downer animals altogether.

Dr. Harold Gonyou, a swine researcher and animal behaviorist at the Prairie Swine Center in Saskatchewan, Canada, was a primary investigator in the study. He says, "This benchmark study was devoted to developing a model to understand why pigs go down and finding ways to prevent the problem. Because of this work, we can now do other reliable studies to look at the metabolic and physiological effects aggressive handling has on pigs."

For this unique study, researchers collected data on two groups of pigs. Under the supervision of a humane treatment committee, one group was moved aggressively and the other gently. Aggressively was defined by the multiple use of an electric prod and yelling; and gently defined by the use of a hollow, plastic tube, and quiet talking. In each group, researchers moved pigs up and down an aisle repeatedly while measuring physical responses to each handling method.

"We created this model to simulate what could be experienced by pigs in a commercial setting," says Gonyou. "We knew using electric prods, bunching pigs up, and using a steep loading ramp would create stress in the aggressively handled group. What we didn't know is what percentage of pigs would become downers."

As the test began, pigs in the aggressive group began to show signs of stress very quickly; blotchy skin, panting, vocalization, and shaking. "Within five minutes the pigs became very hot and showed clear signs of distress," says Gonyou. "These pigs experienced the familiar 'fight or flight' syndrome talked about in humans."

Gender and halothane/stress-gene status did not have an impact on the study's outcome, but handling certainly did. In the strictly handled group, 20.4 percent of the pigs were classified as downers versus 0 percent for the gently handled group.

Aggressive handling practices can result in significant stress to the pig. Not only does this represent significant animal welfare concerns it also results in direct losses through declining meat quality and

How to Handle, Transport Today's Pigs

In conjunction with the National Institute for Animal Agriculture, animal handling experts have created a tip sheet to help producers and anyone who must handle and move pigs. Pocket-sized versions of this checklist are available in English and Spanish from the institute or Elanco Animal Health.

Preparing pigs for moving and transport:

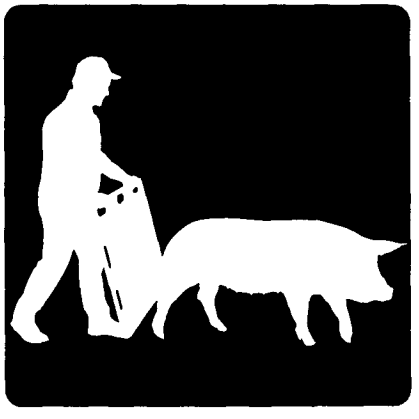
- Handlers should walk slowly within each pen for 1 minute each day or for 5 minutes once per week during the finishing period to
  - A. Accustom the pigs to human contact.
  - B Teach them to move quietly around the handler.
- Withhold feed for 4 to 6 hours before loading OR feed should be withheld 12 to 18 hours before slaughter

Handling and moving pigs:

- Rely on the natural tendency of pigs to follow "leaders" into strange areas rather than forcing the entire group to move along together
- Ensure that lighting over and ahead of moving pigs is bright and evenly distributed, so that there are no distracting shadows
- Move as quietly as possible
- Use panels, paddles or large flags to move pigs. Avoid caning, clubbing, kicking and slapping, which causes injury Minimal electroshock is used only as a last resort

Loading pigs:

- To equalize temperature and lighting, open curtains 15 minutes before loading.
- Load pigs at night or very early in the morning if heat and humidity are high
- Move very small groups of 5 to 6 pigs in a 3-foot wide alley and only 3 pigs at a time in a 2-foot alley.
- Move each small group of pigs immediately from the finishing pen onto the truck.
- Avoid sharp turns in alleys, loading chutes should have less than 20-degree angles
- To minimize fighting among pigs, do not store (hold) large groups of finishing pigs in an alley or holding pen
- The number of pigs per running foot of truck floor (on a 92-inch-wide truck) should be 2.2 (200-lb pig), 1.8 (250-lb pig) and 1 6 (300-lb. pig).



Transporting pigs:

- Transport pigs at night or very early in the morning if heat and humidity are high, and observe the heat index transportation chart.
- Use partitions to divide the load
- Don't leave pigs unnecessarily in a fully loaded truck, drive off immediately after loading, to minimize the temperature rise in loaded, stationary trucks
- Truck drivers should start, brake and stop smoothly to avoid injuring pigs
- Schedule truck arrivals at the packing plant so that pigs can be unloaded promptly.

Manure Storage Must Conform to Guidelines

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania livestock managers considering installing a new manure storage structure or manure lagoon need to be aware that there are Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) regulations that cover the design and construction of these facilities.

According to regulations found under Chapter 91, General Provisions, section 91.36, any animal manure storage facility built after Jan. 29, 2000 must be designed and operated in accordance with DEP's publication titled "Manure Management for Environmental Protection," and the Pennsylvania Technical Guide standards. For semi-solid or liquid manure, these facilities must be designed, constructed, and certified by a Pennsylvania registered professional engineer. These designs must be site-specific and linked to a nutrient management plan that addresses adequate storage capacity.

Recently, the department discovered several manure facilities built after Jan. 29, 2000, that were not certified by a professional engineer. DEP strongly encourages farmers to contact their local county conservation district prior to constructing a manure storage facility. In this way, the farmer can become familiar with the requirement for certification and assure that it is constructed per the regulations.

Information, in the form of a fact sheet, is available on properly dealing with manure storage and certification. This information can be found in the Manure Management for Environmental Protection publication, commonly referred to as the Manure Manual. Copies of the fact sheet or the manual can be obtained by calling the DEP Southcentral Regional Office, Water Quality Operations Section at (717) 705-4707.

"One possibility why modern, heavily muscled pigs seem to be more prone to a severe reaction to stress may be that more muscle mass can create more lactic acid and generate more heat," says Gonyou. "These variables can lead to greater incidences of pigs becoming downers. Also, using an electric prod to hurry pigs along and crowding them can have a severe effect. You need to know how your pigs are being handled on your operation, on the trucks, and at the plants to ensure proper care."

'Hidden' Form Of Ileitis In Swine Poses Big Threat

New Approach Unveiled To Help

ORLANDO, Fla. — Swine researchers attending the American Association of Swine Veterinarians' annual meeting in Orlando, Fla., presented a new approach to a problem pork producers may not even realize their animals are suffering from — subclinical ileitis — a disease that seems invisible, but inflicts noticeable damage.

Unlike clinical ileitis, where producers see diarrhea, feed passage, gauntness, and even death, subclinical ileitis presents no visible signs. However, pigs suffer depressed performance due to Lawsonia intracellularis infection, the cause of all forms of ileitis.

Dr. Roberto Guedes, a swine researcher who specializes in ileitis at the Federal University of Minas Gerais in Brazil, says, "Based on high seroprevalence in swine herds around the world, it seems most populations are infected with subclinical ileitis." A NAHMS serology study supports this assertion for U.S. producers. It found L. intracellularis was present in 96.2 percent of tested herds. This is in contrast to only 37 percent of grow-finish operations found to have clinical ileitis in the USDA's Swine 2000 survey.

Trial data previously presented by Dr. Nate Winkelman, a swine veterinarian from Morris, Minn., underscored the serious impact subclinical ileitis can have on operations. He reported pigs with subclinical ileitis showed a 30 percent decrease in average daily gain with 23 percent worse feed efficiency — an impact that could devastate pig flow and profitability.

Dr. John Deen, a University of Minnesota swine veterinarian and researcher, tells producers and veterinarians not to underestimate the negative impact ileitis can have on pig performance and profitability. "Ileitis is often not as predictable as respiratory disease, but in many cases, more significant in the amount of insult on average daily gain in infected pigs," he says. "That's why producers need to look at interventions that reduce growth variation."

'Hidden' Form Of Ileitis

Although much is still unknown, Dr. Guedes attributes performance losses from subclinical ileitis to the microscopic lesions cause disease, which has a negative impact on growth. He adds, "The influence on herd variation and uniformity can be very high."

Producers should consider three key areas:

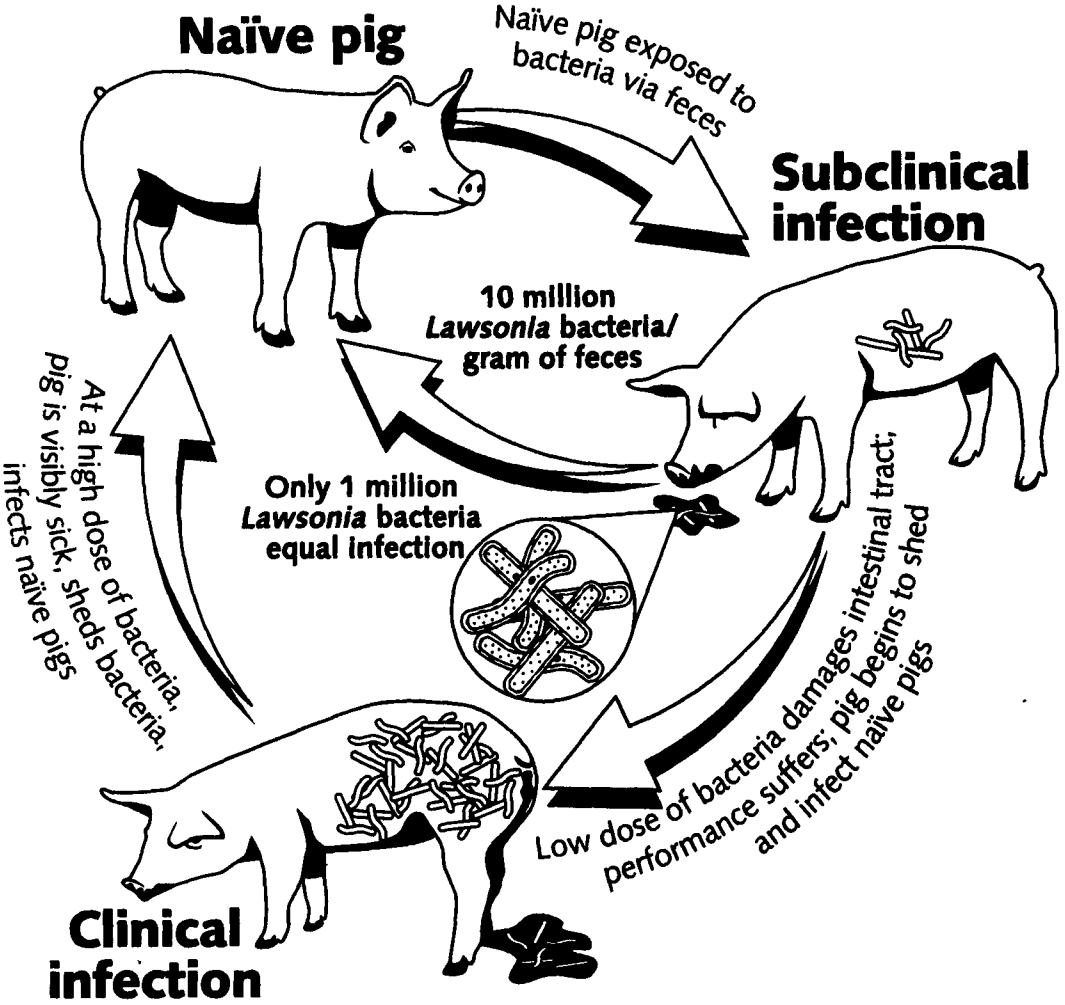
1. Performance. Although clinical signs of ileitis may not be present, subclinical ileitis can rob pigs of performance, as energy is diverted from growth to the immune system to fight invading bacteria. Pigs with subclinical ileitis also shed L. intracellularis and infect other pigs.

2. Pig Flow. Because ileitis has several forms, it affects pigs differently. The results range from mortality caused by severe clinical ileitis to lightweights and variable pigs from subclinical ileitis. Variation impairs pig flow by creating production bottlenecks and compromising all-in/all-out.

3. Economics. While less visible than finisher mortality caused by clinical ileitis, the subclinical form can still cost up to $3.42/pig from reduced performance and poor pig flow.

Ileitis-causing bacteria (L. intracellularis) inflict harm by multiplying inside intestinal cells, causing a thickening of the gut wall. This causes poor digestion, reduced feed intake, slow growth, and even death. These diseased cells inside the gut slough off, are excreted through the feces, and can infect other pigs.

Ileitis cycle



Naïve pig
Naïve pig exposed to bacteria via feces
Subclinical infection
10 million Lawsonia bacteria/ gram of feces
Only 1 million Lawsonia bacteria equal infection
At a high dose of bacteria, pig is visibly sick, sheds bacteria, infects naïve pigs
Low dose of bacteria damages intestinal tract; performance suffers; pig begins to shed and infect naïve pigs
Clinical infection

Study Reconfirms Ileitis As No. 1 Swine Disease

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — A new study finds agreement among pork producers, veterinarians, and feed industry representatives that ileitis is the most-targeted disease on farms today. The finding confirms an ongoing, deep concern about ileitis and its negative effects on performance, mortality, and pig flow.

Part of the reason for ileitis' number-one ranking may center on its pervasive nature, as earlier studies found 96.2 percent of U.S. tested herds were positive for the bacteria causing ileitis — Lawsonia intracellularis. Ileitis commonly strikes pigs from 50 pounds up to market weight.

Of the 200 participants surveyed in the new study, underwritten by Elanco Animal Health, more reported having current on-farm battles against ileitis than respiratory disease, including mycoplasma. This was also true for salmonella and hemorrhagic bowel syndrome. Another finding from the study showed 86 percent of the respondents viewed Tylan® Premix as the best product for ileitis control. In addition, study participants rated Tylan highest in overall satisfaction compared to other products.

Previous studies, which asked swine veterinarians about ileitis, may also shed light on why the industry appears to be unified in its fight against the disease. Some of these findings included:

- Ileitis-caused variation translates into average losses of $8.11 per head.
- 99.2 percent of veterinarians observe increased variation due to ileitis.
- 80.2 percent of veterinarians think ileitis is as bad, or worse than it was five years ago, while 14.9 percent say ileitis is less of a problem.

Dr. Tom Marsteller, swine technical consultant for Elanco, says producers can limit the negative impact of ileitis by implementing a comprehensive herd-health program developed with cooperation between the producer, veterinarian and feed supplier.

For many operations, he recommends the prudent use of Tylan Premix in swine rations at 100 grams per ton for 21 days for the prevention and control of ileitis. Marsteller also points to the product's zero withdrawal as a benefit in complying with Pork Quality Assurance guidelines.

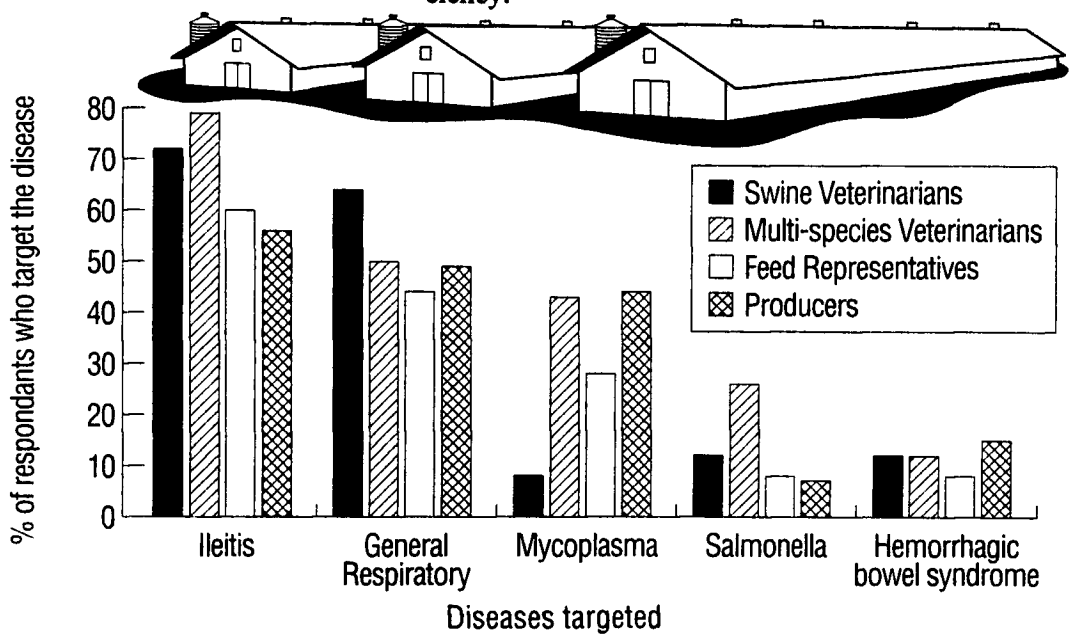
Today's on-farm disease battles



A new swine-health study finds consensus among pork producer, veterinarian and feed-industry groups that ileitis is the number-one disease being fought today. Without prompting of any kind, study participants ranked ileitis higher than respiratory disease, mycoplasma, salmonella and hemorrhagic bowel syndrome.

Time To Review Nutrient Balances In Fields

NORCROSS, Ga. — The 2002 growing season brought wide variation in yields, so it is important to review nutrient balances for the 2003 season. Of course, the best approach is to take soil tests and plan nutrient applications according to their results. For most fields. the plan for 2003 should be to follow what was planned already. But where 2002 yields were unusually high or unusually low, some adjustments may be appropriate.

If the plan calls for maintenance applications, then changes needed may be minor. Recalculate needed application rates based upon the harvested yields. If build-up nutrient rates are part of the ongoing plan, and yields were lower than expected, the extra nutrients left from the 2002 crop will help speed up the progress to the build goal. Or 2003 applications can be adjusted downward slightly. If 2002 yields were above expectations, the 2003 nutrient applications may need to be ratcheted upward to stay on course.

Very likely, the changes from the plan will be small. But for some fields that yielded 100 bushels per acre or more below expected levels, there may be reason to make adjustments in fertilizer applications plans. "Left over" nutrients can be estimated from the change in expected crop yield multiplied by the crop removal per unit of yield.

Every field's nutrient plan should be reviewed before final decisions are made on fertilizer application. Go back to the most recent soil tests, then review crop removals and fertilizer and/or manure applications since the samples were collected. Calculate a net nutrient balance, and the expected impact on soil tests using the relations above. Make adjustments to the nutrient plan for fields where the calculated progress is not meeting expectations.

Collect new soil samples if none have been done in the last three or four years. It may be helpful to have tests taken more frequently during a major build-up period.

A new Excel spreadsheet tool, PKalc, can be downloaded from the PPI Website: www.ppi-far.org, under the listing, "Toolbox Resources." PKalc provides a simple worksheet to compute estimated phosphorus and potassium nutrient balances over a period of up to 10 years. While this "checkbook" approach is a crude estimate of nutrient balance, it offers a useful guide to help keep nutrient management on target.

New Process Makes Swine Wastewater Environmentally Friendly

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman announced recently that USDA scientists have developed a process that can remove phosphorus from swine production wastewater and turn it into a solid, marketable fertilizer, while converting the leftover effluent into a liquid crop fertilizer that is more environmentally friendly than manure.

"This technology is a good example of how agricultural research can provide benefits to everyone through environmental protection and improvement," said Veneman. "This research provides an opportunity to help farmers better protect the environment and enhance the soil they use for planting."

The process was developed by soil scientists Matias Vanotti, Ariel Szogi and Patrick Hunt at the Coastal Plains Soil, Water and Plant Research Center, operated by USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Florence, S.C. ARS is the chief scientific research agency of USDA.

The new process has several positive implications. Removing phosphorus from wastewater can cut down on any excess phosphorus that may run off into streams and rivers. Excess amounts of phosphorus can lead to oxygen depletion in water bodies.

During processing, hydrated lime precipitates most of the phosphorus in the wastewater as a solid and converts it into a marketable phosphate fertilizer. This phosphorus could be a boon to the fertilizer industry, because world reserves of the nutrient are limited.

Another benefit is that the high pH achieved by the process destroys disease-causing pathogens present in the leftover liquid.

Meanwhile, the effluent contains a nitrogen-to-phosphorus ratio greater than 12 to 1-ideal for crop irrigation, which requires an 8-to-1 ratio. Regular manure offers a nitrogen-to-phosphorus ratio of 4 to 1.

This higher nitrogen-phosphorus ratio translates into less excess phosphorus on land on which the treated wastewater is applied.

A patent application has been submitted for the combined nitrogen- and phosphorus-removal processes, which will be tested through next summer at a full-scale demonstration facility that opened earlier this month in Duplin County, N.C.

Key Factors For Efficient Management Of Finisher Hogs

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — We need look back only a few years to find a swine industry that didn't take the finishing phase of production too seriously. In retrospect, it's easy to see why. The finisher hog seldom falls prey to lethal diseases that affect the baby pig. It will eat and grow on just about anything, including substandard diets. The type of housing was simple and the pigs still reached market weight. So, all-in-all-out production, precise feed formulation, and sophisticated ventilation were slow to come for the finishing enterprise.

We now recognize that the inputs and outputs of the finisher hog exceed those of any other phase of production with the possible exception of lactation. Into the finisher house, we pour feed, water, and young pigs; four months later, we have a barn full of market hogs and manure. When things go right, the productivity is maximized. But subtle changes in costs, efficiency, and output can have major impacts on the bottom line.

Here then is a list of factors affecting the finisher hog. Collectively they represent the difference between success and failure.

Feeder Pig Health

There is no issue as important as this one. Begin the finishing process with a healthy pig, and you stand a good chance of success. Bring a pig into the finisher that is suffering from PRRS, Strep Suis, or Iletitis and it's possible to succeed, but not without a lot of effort.

All-In-All-Out (AIAO)

Don't violate this concept. If your operation isn't set up for all-in-all-out, then get as close to it as you can. Creating separate rooms to accommodate no more than 3-4 weeks of production will reduce disease turnover and recirculation of pathogens.

Use Pigs From a Single Source

Producers with AIAO systems have been able to tolerate multiple sources of feeder pigs. Unfortunately, the economics of hog production no longer permits us to simply tolerate an imperfection like this. If the system doesn't provide a single source of pigs, you should probably consider changing the system.

Cull Early, Cull Often

There is a saying, "The first loss is the easiest one to take." In an ideal world, the poor-doing pigs will be culled from the nursery and not taken to the grower-finisher. Unfortunately, they sometimes show up with the rest of the load.

When they do, recognize who they are and give them a new home as soon as possible. Left in the barn, they drag down the overall weight gain and feed conversion.

Worse, they can shed organisms which alter the health of most of the remaining pigs. Most of the culling should be completed in the first few weeks after arrival, but this can and should be an on-going process. Check every pig. Check every day.

Incoming Weight Uniform and At Least 45 Pounds

Incoming weight is especially important in systems that are compromised for any reason (less than perfect health, continuous flow, marginal ventilation). But in every situation, pigs with heavier starting weights adapt sooner, grow faster, and obviously reach market weight more quickly.

Keeping the pigs uniform also enables you to formulate the diet for a precise weight. This provides an opportunity to change the diet frequently, thereby maximizing performance and minimizing the possibility of over- or under-formulating the diet.

Tail-Enders

After sending 80 percent of the pigs to market from your barn, take a look at what's left. If they're all approaching market weight, you've got a successful system. But if the leftovers range in weight from 140 to 200 pounds, you have a decision to make, and whatever path you choose will cost money. Send them at a light market weight and you'll take a weight sort penalty.

Wait for all the pigs to reach market weight and it may take another month. Or send the pigs to another, cheaper barn, and finish them out there. This eliminates eight penalities, but it adds to the cost of production. Minimizing the number of tail-enders should be a goal of production.

Minimizing the number of tail-enders should be a goal of every finishing producer. Each of the management strategies listed above are important steps to reaching this goal.

Number of Pigs Per Pen

Keep this at 25 pigs or less. When group sizes exceed 25, the social stability breaks down, resulting in more unrest among the pigs.

Moving and Loading Hogs

As a producer, you represent a critical link between the farm and the dinner table. Clearly, genetics plays an important role in lean content and pork quality. But it's just as clear that pork quality can suffer when pigs are not loaded carefully.

Design your facilities so that pigs move with a minimum of pushing and persuasion. Sharp corners, narrow alleys, and loading chutes through which pigs can see out should not be part of your system.

The more shouting, slapping, and shocking that is required to move the pigs from the pen to the truck the greater the incidence of pale, soft, and exudative (PSE) pork.

Feeder Adjustment

Too many producers believe that feeder adjustments is a once-a-month routine. Removing any fouled feed and adjusting the feeders should be a daily process.

Split Sex Feeding

Barrows grow faster and eat more than gilts, but gilts have more muscle and are leaner. So it's logical that gilts respond to higher dietary lysine. The economic incentive to split sex feeding is to optimize carcass value in the gilt and to minimize feed cost for the barrows.

Formulation for Lean Gain

Many producers assume that the lysine concentration in their grow-finish diet matches the needs of the pig. Actually, making this decision requires considerable effort and some intelligent assumptions. For example, to determine the optimum lysine concentration, the following information is needed: average starting weight, average days on feed, average carcass weight, and loin eye area and backfat (or comparable optical probe measurements).

From these values, we can calculate lean gain per day and then estimate the daily lysine requirements. The average feed intake must be known to calculate the appropriate lysine percentage for the diet. Because this process is a bit complicated, most producers will not go to the effort.

Estimating the most economical lysine concentration is even more difficult because it requires knowing how pigs respond to varying lysine levels, as well as the payment incentives in the packer's weight and grade program.

But difficult as it is, you must go through the process if you wish to remain competitive.

Minimizing Nutrient Excretion

Our industry is just beginning to consider the amount of nutrients that are excreted by the pigs. In fact, at least 60 percent of any nutrient we feed will end up in the manure. The excretion of two of the major soil nutrients, nitrogen and phosphorus, can be reduced by 15-20 percent through changes in diet formulation

A simple and economical way to minimize nitrogen excretion is to lower the protein content and correct the deficiency by adding crystalline lysine. For example, 100 pounds of soybean meal can be safely removed from a one-ton diet by replacing it with 96.5 pounds of corn and 3.5 pounds of lysine-HCI. Many producers already do this because the corn/lysine mixture is often cheaper than the soybean meal.

Our problem with this substitution is that it lowers the nitrogen in the manure, while the phosphorus remains unchanged making the nitrogen-:phosphorus ratio somewhat worse. Most producers develop their nutrient management plans on the basis of nitrogen. Under normal conditions, applying manure to meet the crop's needs for nitrogen will provide more phosphorus than is required.

A relatively new approach is to use phytase, an enzyme that helps improve phosphorus availability. Much of the phosphorus in plant-based ingredients is not digestible by the pig. To provide adequate phosphorus, we use inorganic supplements.

By adding phytase to the diet, the phosphorus is more readily available, and we can reduce the amount of supplemental phosphorus. This means the total amount of phosphorus excreted in the manure is also reduced. This doesn't completely eliminate the nitrogen:phosphorus imbalance in the manure, but it's an important step in the right direction.

Feed Withdrawal

If possible, withdraw access to feed about 16 hours prior to the expected time of slaughter. This reduces the risk of puncturing the gut during the processing, and it also saves you at least 50 cents per pig.

Water Intake

Many producers are recognizing the benefits of

Upright Silo Safety

Dawna L. Cyr
Steven B. Johnson
Maine Cooperative Extension

Silos are very important to many farm operations, but they are also the source of many accidents. These accidents include falls, electrocution, entanglement in augers, and silo gas inhalation.

Safety Guidelines For Silos

Make silos off limits to children and unauthorized personnel. Barricade or lock silos up. Keep portable ladders away from these areas. All feed storage ladders should end at least seven feet off the ground. Make sure these ladders are in sound condition.

When filling or emptying silos, never allow people in or around them. Warning decals recognizable to children should be on silo filling equipment.

Lockout the power supply on all unloading mechanisms. Serious injuries have occurred when someone was inside a silo and the unloader started. It is very important to be able to lock the switch off to electric or PTO powered silo unloaders. This will prevent anyone from starting the unloaders when someone is inside the structure.

Entering Silos

If the silo needs work, try to find a way of getting the job done without entering it. If this cannot be done, take these safety measures:

- Make sure you have installed ladders inside and out of all silos. Do not rely on a rope, chain, or pipe ladder hanging from the roof. They are not reliable and may obstruct flow during filling or increase drag during unloading. If you should become trapped in a silo, stay near the outer wall and keep moving. If necessary, you can carefully walk around the outer edge until the bin is empty and the flow stops.
- Always use a rope and safety harness when entering a dangerous silo situation. Never rely on a second person outside the bin to whom you shout instructions. Outside noise may block out or garble your calls for action or help. The second person may fall or stumble in the panic and haste of climbing and running to shut down equipment.
- Always have three people involved when entering a questionable storage situation. Lifting one person on a rope and safety harness from inside requires two people on the outside. One can then go for help while the other gives preliminary aid.

Respiratory Problems

Farmer's Lung and Toxic Organic Dust Syndrome (TODS) are two respiratory diseases that affect farmers. Breathing dusts from decayed plant material over a period of time can lead to these very serious diseases.

Farmer's Lung is caused by dust from moldy hay, straw, and grain. Anyone who is allergic to hay mold spores and who breathes air filled with these mold spores can get Farmer's Lung.

Symptoms usually occur four to six hours after being exposed to hay mold spores. These symptoms include increased coughing and bringing up more mucous than usual, fever, and sometimes, chills, installing a water meter on the barn, and keeping a daily record of water intake. A sudden drop in water intake is the earliest indicator of a disease problem.

(Turn to Page 38)

Key Factors

Over the entire finishing period, water usage will average about two gallons per head per day. Minimizing water wastage also minimizes manure output.

Ventilation and Temperature Management

During cool weather, the challenge is to provide an adequate amount of fresh air without creating drafts or uncomfortable temperatures. During hot weather, we must provide significant air movement to keep the pigs from becoming too hot. The advent of tunnel ventilation (along with foggers and evaporative cooling) has enabled producers to keep pigs comfortable and growing in warm weather.

Cold weather ventilation is more difficult. Providing lots of fresh air often brings drafts and cold temperatures. Using a very low ventilation rate sacrifices air quality. It's sometimes difficult to find a happy medium, but here are some rules of thumb:

Check relative humidity in the barn during cold weather. Ideal humidity levels range from 55-75 percent;

Remember that pig comfort is your first priority. You may have to sacrifice air quality somewhat to keep the pigs comfortable;

Keep fans, inlets, and curtains functional and well maintained. Grower finisher barns generally function well during the first year of operation. That level of performance can be maintained if you keep the fan blades and louvers clean, and the curtains functional.

shortness of breath, discomfort in the lungs, and a tightness and/or pains in the chest.

The allergic reactions can either be acute or chronic. Acute attacks resemble the flu or pneumonia and, in extreme cases, the victim may go into shock. Chronic reactions resemble nagging chest colds. But by the time the person receives treatment, permanent damage is already done.

People with Farmer's Lung who do not avoid hay mold may get sicker and sicker until they are no longer able to do hard work and, after many years, may be unable to be active at all. People can die from Farmer's Lung. Permanent lung damage is only prevented by eliminating the exposure to mold dusts.

If you think you have Farmer's Lung, see your physician. Explain your symptoms. Some physicians may not be very familiar with the disease, so it may be necessary to refer you to a specialist. A blood test, a chest x-ray and a breathing capacity test are some of the tests used to diagnose Farmer's Lung. Other tests may be needed as well.

Toxic Organic Dust Syndrome (TODS) is caused by exposure to very large amounts of dust. TODS symptoms are identical to those resulting from an acute Farmer's Lung attack. TODS is not an allergic reaction. Anyone can get TODS and can become very sick from this condition, but most people recover completely. Having TODS does not damage the lungs and does not increase the risk of getting TODS again.

Mold

Spoiled hay and silage produces mold spores that can be inhaled through the nose and mouth. These spores irritate sensitive tissue in the mouth and nose. Sometimes this can cause severe reactions and hospitalization. Never work alone and unprotected in heavy mold dust. Always wear a respirator that can filter fine dust particles. Avoid unnecessary exposure to mold dust.

To prevent mold growth, follow proper filling and chopping guidelines for good fermentation. Use rocks, chains, tires, lime, or other weights, but never use silage to hold down plastic covers. If mold growth occurs, wet down the top layer of silage before removing it. This prevents moldy dust from becoming airborne.

This should be done even if the silage was covered with a plastic sheet, because the top layers still tend to mold. Handle dusty materials mechanically if this creates less dust or keeps you far enough away. Wear a close fitting mechanical filter respirator.

Silo Gases

Nitrogen dioxide is a deadly silo gas. If forms as a result of chemical reactions that begin almost immediately after chopped plant material is placed in a silo. Nitrogen dioxide is heavier than air and can flow out and settle near the ground.

It may be visible as a reddish to yellowish-brown haze around the base of a recently filled silo. It has a characteristic bleach-like odor and leaves a burning sensation in the nose, throat, and chest. Nitrogen dioxide can result in instant death or permanent lung damage. The first three weeks after filling a silo is when the risk of exposure is greatest.

Carbon dioxide is also a hazard. It replaces the air in the confined headspace of a silo. As with nitrogen dioxide, the risk of exposure is greatest the first three weeks after filling a silo.

Due to risk of exposure to nitrogen dioxide and carbon dioxide, stay out of silos during filling and for three weeks, unless you wear an air-supplying respirator. If a silo must be entered, do it immediately after blowing the last load into the structure. Leave the blower running for ventilation while anyone is inside. Wear a lifeline and have outside help available. Post a silo gas warning, and declare the silo off-limits to everyone. Lock up all unloading mechanisms.

Always wear a self-contained breathing apparatus if you must enter the silo within four to six weeks after filling. Have three people outside to help if needed. Keep a hatch door open near the level of the silage within the silo.

Running the blower for 15 minutes or more will help freshen the silo. Keep it running constantly to provide as much air movement as possible. Should anyone collapse as a result of exposure to silo gas, get them to a physician immediately.

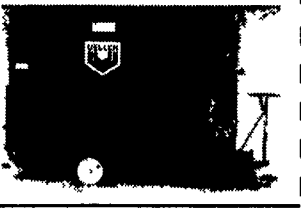
UEBLER FEEDING MACHINES



Since 1921
Ritchie
waters 'em right.

Feedlot and Dairy Operators Choose The Water Master because it's sturdy, easy to maintain & will not pit, crack or deteriorate.
